INSURGENTS WIN IN FIGHT ON THE SENATE ELECTION

After the most exciting debate that the House has known this year, a motion to reconsider yesterday's passage of the Riley resolutions for the direct election of United States senators was defeated today by a roll call vote of 89 to 115.

Merits of the question at issue were thrown to the winds and those who were fortunate enough to secure the floor indulged in the most artistic mud-slinging contest that has ever been seen in the Legislature. The vote yesterday passing the resolution was 116 to 110.

MACHINE CHARGED WITH DICTATING TO MEMBERS.

Representative Brown of Medford opened the festivities. Through the indulgence of Underhill of Somerville, acting Speaker, Brown held the floor for fifteen minutes. Picking Riley of Malden and Callahan of Ward 9, Boston, as his especial targets, Brown took up their charges of yesterday and came on anxious to sing the shorter and uglier word as any gentleman could. His speech was a general denial of the statements that the Republican machine had tried to coerce legislators to vote against the Riley resolutions, with a generous flavoring of personal stings for his opponents.

He defied anyone to show that the Republican machine had ever interfered with legislation.

Callahan of Ward 9 accepted the defi. "I would respectfully call attention," he said, "to the manner in which Senator Lodge and his associates in the Republican State committee jammed the Boston charter bill down the throats of the voters of this city last year. At least twenty Republicans told me last year that they did not believe in the charter bill, but that they had been threatened with defeat by the machine if they voted against it. I hate to do this, but if the gentleman from Medford (Brown) insists, I'll tell something about his own action on the charter bill."

"Spit it out," shouted Brown, whereupon Callahan said:

"The gentleman from Medford (Brown) gave me a solemn pledge last year that he would vote to have the Street Commissioners continued as an elective body. Yet when the vote came he voted the other way. I ask the gentleman to tell the House whether it was the State machine or somebody else that induced him to break his pledge."

Brown denied that he had ever given such a pledge.

Knight of Jamaica Plain, floor leader of the House and one of the stanchest supporters of the direct election resolutions, followed with an attack on Brown "whose argument here to-day proves that a drowning man will clutch at a straw."

"Dodging the Issue."

"Hopelessly defeated," said Knight, "the member from Medford tries to divert the attention of the House by calling attention to something that happened last year."

Shaw of Charlestown offered to prove to "anybody satisfied" that the "machine" in the House were suborned to vote against the Riley resolutions. He waved a bunch of telegrams received by members. The defeat of the motion to reconsider yesterday's passage of the resolutions followed. Several members who voted yesterday against the measure voted to-day against reconsideration. They announced that they were disgusted with the tactics of their enemies of the resolutions.

MELLEN AIDED BY WALKER

Speaker Joseph Walker of the House of Representatives, before the Committee on Railroads to-day, favored Governor Draper's recommendation that the Boston Railroad Holding Company be allowed to issue preferred stock "to help develop the Boston & Maine." The issue would not be taxable.

Speaker Walker's stand caused some surprise, as the Speaker strenuously opposed the Governor's previous recommendation to make the Holding Company bonds legal investments for savings banks.

Speaker Walker said:

"At a recent hearing before the Committee on Banks and Banking and the committee on Railroads sitting jointly I opposed the proposition of the Governor to make the bonds of the Boston Railroad Holding Company a legal investment for savings banks. That was a serious issue question, and in my judgment could not be treated as a railroad question without danger to the savings banks. The Governor has since then sent in the message now before us, recommending that the Holding Company be permitted to issue preferred stock to be guaranteed by the New Haven Railroad.

Bond Issues Already Allowed.

"That company already has the right to issue bonds guaranteed by the New Haven road. Such bonds are subject to taxation in Massachusetts and in other cities. The fact that these bonds are subject to taxation in Massachusetts greatly restricts their sale in Massachusetts and affects the price for which they can be sold. The average rate of taxation in Massachusetts is over 1½ per cent. These bonds bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. Therefore, the bonds would not a holder whose bonds were taxed by taxation less than 2½ per cent. Few investors in Massachusetts can afford to invest money at 2½ per cent.

"There are legal as well as other objections to exempting these bonds from taxation. It is believed that preferred stock guaranteed by the New Haven road would be as safe and as good securities as such bonds. Such preferred stock would be tax exempt under our law. Therefore, by the issue of such stock the road could get the money which it required to improve and develop the Boston & Maine railroad cheaper than by the issue of such bonds.

Urges B. & M. Improvements.

"This means that, for the issue of a given amount of such securities, more money will be produced for the use of the railroad. This is in the interest of the shipper and in the interest of the public generally. It is consistent with the long established policy of Massachusetts, viz., to permit a public service corporation to issue only such an amount of securities at as high a price as possible, to produce the necessary funds.

"It is important that the right to issue such preferred stock be granted this year. It is essential to the interests of Massachusetts and of the Boston & Maine Railroad that the railroad improvements contemplated should be made as soon as possible. Therefore, to delay in granting the right to issue this preferred stock is directly against the interests of the people of Massachusetts."

Byrnes Puts in a Bill.

Vice-President T. F. Byrnes of the New Haven admitted the following bill to the committee on covering its suggestion:

Section 1—The Boston Railroad Holding Company shall be subject to Section 27 of Chapter 437 of the Acts of the year 1903.

Section 2—Any railroad corporation owning preferred stock in the Boston Railroad Holding Company may sell such stock provided the same by its terms has no voting power.

Section 3—Any railroad corporation may guarantee the principal and dividends upon such preferred stock.

Section 4—The Boston Railroad Holding Company may at any time declare that the B. & M. stock owned by it shall be pledged to secure the dividends and principal of its preferred stock, which pledge shall have priority over the claims of subsequent creditors.

CUMMINGS'S NAME BEFORE COMMISSION

The Civil Service Commission to-day received Mayor Fitzgerald's appointments of Matthew Cummings as superintendent of public buildings; Joseph P. Lyons as penal institutions commissioner, and Morris L. Morrison as principal assessor. The Commission has two weeks in which to pass on the names submitted.

Mr. Cummings resides in Neponset, Ward 24. He served as superintendent of street cleaning under the first administration of Mayor Fitzgerald. He was a candidate for the mayoralty nomination in the last campaign but withdrew when public sentiment indicated that it would be a battle between Mr. Fitzgerald and James J. Storrow. He is known all over the United States on account of his splendid service to the Ancient order of Hibernians of which he is national president.

Joseph P. Lyons is appointed to take the place left vacant by the resignation of Fred S. Gore, a Hibbard appointment. Mr. Lyons is a law partner of Judge Murray of the Municipal Court. He has been active in Boston politics for ten years.

PAPKE FIGHT HITS BIG SNAG IN CALIFORNIA

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—A special received here from Redwood City says that District Attorney Bullock of San Mateo county has taken steps to prevent the Papke-Thomas fight next Saturday at Coffroth's Colma arena.

His decision was made after careful consideration of the California fight law. He declared to-day that he had reached the conclusion that the proposed match could be construed as nothing but a prize fight, forbidden by the law of California, and that therefore it was his duty to prevent it.

If the Papke-Thomas fight is stopped, there is no hope that the Jeffries-Johnson battle can be fought in California, say fight fans.

RUNAWAY PERIL FOR CHILDREN

Scores of children on their way to school were thrown into a panic and several women had narrow escapes from being trampled upon when a pair of horses attached to a carriage ran away on Adams street, Dorchester, to-day.

The horses were in charge of Harold Wilde of Charles street, Dorchester, who had unloaded his passengers at St. Peter's Catholic Church, Meeting House Hill, to attend a funeral mass. Wilde started back to Field's Corner, intending to return for his passengers.

In going down Adams street the horses were frightened by a passing automobile and became unmanageable.

After running a mile one of the horses lost his footing and fell. The animal was badly injured.

EXPLOSION ON BATTLESHIP

DOVER, May 11.—A report was received here to-day of a serious explosion on board the battleship London in Norwegian waters. The report is unconfirmed and no details have been received.

The London is a twin screw battleship with thirteen guns of a fourteen inch caliber and larger. She is of 15,000 tons with 15,000 indicated horsepower. When launched two years ago she was one of the world's six biggest warships. Her length is 490 feet, beam 75. Four twelve-inch guns are her principal armament and her complement is 750 men. She cost $5,000,000.

HOLD SUSPECT FOR ROBBERIES AT LYNN

LYNN, May 11.—In the arrest by Inspector Shields in Boston to-day of a Greek giving the name of Pappas, the Lynn police think that they have got trace of the sneak thief and burglar who reported this place a week ago. When Inspector Shields of the Boston department searched the man he found a gold watch and chain which has been identified as the one stolen from the house of Sewell Clark at No. 48 Lafayette park on the morning of May 2. Many other houses were entered besides the Clark residence. Pappas will be arraigned in police court here to-morrow.

MRS. LONGWORTH OFF TO MEET ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, May 11.—Mrs. Nicholas Longworth sailed to-day on the liner Mauretania to join her father, Theodore Roosevelt, in England.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

EX-PRESIDENT IS NAMED TO ATTEND KING'S OBSEQUIES

Official Announcement by President Taft To-day and Colonel Roosevelt's Acceptance, Despite Reported Serious Illness.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—President Taft to-day named former President Roosevelt as special ambassador to represent the United States at the funeral of the late King Edward VII. Colonel Roosevelt has accepted.

Ambassador Bryce and other officials of the British embassy will hold memorial services for the late King in St. John's Episcopal Church on May 20.

President Taft, members of the cabinet, the diplomatic corps and the House and Senate Foreign Relations Committees will attend.

SEES SHAM BATTLE AS KAISER'S GUEST

BERLIN, May 11.—Alarming reports concerning the condition of ex-President Roosevelt spread over Berlin to-day after he had accompanied the Kaiser to a sham battle, in which 12,000 soldiers participated.

It was declared that Mr. Roosevelt was to undergo a thorough examination by throat specialists immediately. Dr. Frankel, the specialist who is caring for the former President, refused to discuss the reports, merely stating that he had told Colonel Roosevelt that there was no reason why he should not attend the maneuvres. Mr. Roosevelt is suffering from acute laryngitis.

"Secret" Sham Battle.

Mr. Roosevelt in secret reviewed the crack regiments of Europe's war lord and judged a sham battle which eclipsed any pageant or entertainment previously arranged for him on his tour of Europe. At the direct command of the Emperor, every effort was made to prevent any but himself, his guest and the participants being present.

Signal honor was paid Mr. Roosevelt after the military review, when as the Kaiser led the party up Middleburg Hill, where there were assembled 800 officers, he presented the guest then: "My friend, Mr. Roosevelt, America's most distinguished citizen and the only civilian in the world who ever reviewed German troops. Hoch!"

The ex-President himself led the cheers that followed. The party returned to town in the afternoon. Mr. Roosevelt remained at the embassy preparing for Ambassador Bryce's arrival.

The manoeuvres, which gave Mr. Roosevelt opportunity to compare Germany's finest fighters with those of France, who reviewed him at Paris, was held at the Doeberitz field.

It was only after Mr. Roosevelt's throat had been examined by Professor Frankel, the specialist under whose care the ex-President has been placed while in Berlin, that the trip to the military field was undertaken. A good night's rest, it was announced, had done much to improve his condition, and the visit to Doeberitz was declared safe though the patient was advised to take the utmost care of himself, as the acute but benign laryngitis from which he is suffering, the direct outcome, it is now said, of his African hunting trip, contained possibilities of greater trouble. Laryngitis, according to Dr. Frankel, was caused by bronchitis, which in turn was the result of exposure in the tropics.

Gains Valuable Pointers.

To-day's sham battle gave to Mr. Roosevelt the chance to gain intimate knowledge of the German army. When he returns to America he will probably know as much about European fighting organizations as any man alive, having seen at close range and in action Soudanese, Egyptian, Italian, Austrian, French and German troops.

Extraordinary preparations were made for the sham battle and the review to-day. It has become known that this feature of Mr. Roosevelt's entertainment was insisted upon by the Kaiser.

Mr. Roosevelt might have been a general himself, judging from the show of reflected glory about him in the field. There were in the party, Lieutenant-General Sir Neville Lyttelton, Major Pitcairn Campbell and Brigadier-General Thaddeus Kosciusko, Polish heroes of the American revolutionary war. Secretary of War Dickinson presided at to-day's ceremonies.

CRANE AND ALDRICH CONFER WITH TAFT

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Senators Aldrich and Crane and Representatives Dalzell and Payne were in conference to-day with President Taft about matters concerning the administration legislative program.

FLEISCHER TELLS OF TRIP IN BALLOON

HOLDEN, May 11.—The Rev. Charles Fleischer, the Boston rabbi, went up in a balloon from here for a three hours' trip of seventy-five miles at 4 a. m. to-day. He landed at 7 o'clock.

With him were Pilot Charles J. Glidden and J. J. Van Valkenburg of South Framingham. The object of the ascent was to get a clearer view of Halley's comet, but the fiery visitor was hidden in the morning haze.

Here is what the rabbi had to say of his impressions among the clouds:

"The first flight of mine gave me pleasure far beyond any I had imagined. I had felt not the slightest fear in thinking of the trip, and the experience itself completely justified that fearlessness. Mainly my continuous ease was due to the utter absence of danger and to the steady fascination of the voyage.

"The impressive silence, exquisite beauty of the landscape and the graceful flight of the balloon leave the features that stand out in this first analysis of my new joy."

DIVORCED ACTRESS ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

NEW YORK, May 11.—"Kindly give me only a local brevity. Don't put the (X) where the body was found. Make the closing number a local brevity, a 'good fellow' ask." These were the last requests of Florence Harpenau, thirty years old of Sacramento, Cal., formerly a chorus girl in New York and divorced three weeks ago from Otto H. Heyneman of San Francisco, when the owners of pool in her room in the Hotel Wellington, Seventh avenue and Fifty-sixth street. She was taken to the Flower Hospital, and the doctor say she will die.

FOREST FIRES IMPERIL LIFE IN NORTHWEST

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 11.—To-day's reports show that there is no sign of the forest fires raging in northern Wisconsin, Minnesota or the upper peninsula of Michigan abating, and hereabouts efforts are being made to combat the progress of the flames.

Hundreds of lives are endangered and many small towns are threatened with destruction.

The entire northeastern part of Minnesota is smoking and smouldering and a dense pall of smoke covers the country. Reports of forest fires from the city of Superior, Wis., indicate that the fires are scattered over an area of at least 500 miles. The loss of property is likely to run over the lake, making navigation dangerous. Thunder and clouds of smoke are reported from Washburn. From the Reservation River in Minnesota, thirty miles beyond Grand Marais, to points fifty miles west of Duluth, serious reports are made.

Grand Marais, Minn., is believed to have been destroyed. A wireless message was received at Duluth stating that the town was deserted. Efforts to send help to the formation were without result. Relief trains are being rushed to the district and a car loaded with axes and picks is to be sent to check the flames were sent from Duluth.

KOSCIUSKO, PULASKI STATUES UNVEILED

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Thousands of Poles from many sections of the country gathered here to-day to attend the unveiling ceremonies of the monuments of Brigadier General Casimir Pulaski, and Brigadier General Thaddeus Kosciusko, Polish heroes of the American revolutionary war. Secretary of War Dickinson presided at to-day's ceremonies.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, May 11.—Before the Speed Boys could put over another victory on the Browns the Westerners were due to have something to say in the matter and Manager Connors rose the riot act to his bunch before they got into action which caused them to wrestle all over with trouble for the home talent.

The announcement that the Browns would spring another southpaw had an terors for Donovan's braves who batted Boston in the last two games and were bonded to extend to any of the brand text ready to attend to any of the Red Sox who dared to show his face. Mr. Donovan, youthful boniface left hand flinger, was the lad scheduled to fool the batters, but he decided at the eleventh hour that he would rub eh mustered to help out his curves with the local tossers having their hitting eyes brightened for any kind of wrigglers.

NATIONAL LEAGUE GROUNDS, St. Louis, May 11.—The visiting Doves faced the Cardinals in the third battle of the four-game series and the local fans had a hot more respect for the Bostoners for the gameness they showed in running out the second contest in their favor and making the score one all.

The big turnout of yesterday was repeated, as few cared to miss the conflict between the evenly matched teams, and they know it would be a scrap for the limit on the whole distance without many breathing spells.

The Doves were put down as the surprise springers who were never picked still the best left hander in the league would eh mustered to help out his curves with the local tossers having their hitting eyes brightened for any kind of wrigglers.

ROYAL FUNERAL GUESTS TO BE WELL GUARDED

LONDON, May 11.—Under the direct supervision of King George V., the machinery of the secret police was to-day set in motion to guard against an anarchistic outbreak during the last rites over the late Edward VII. It is not for himself that the "Sailor King" fears, but for the throng of royalty that will be in London for the services. He is determined that there shall be no danger for the sovereigns, numbering at least seven, who will come from the Continent.

The secret service of every European nation has already been called upon for aid and a dragnet is being drawn from one end of the continent to the other, every known anarchist being kept under surveillance.

With his private secretary, Sir Arthur Bigge, the new ruler of England has discussed the situation frankly and thoroughly. Sir Arthur took the matter up with the heads of the Scotland Yard force, informing them of the King's wishes.

Alexandra's Sister in London.

Not only have the honorary police been put on their guard and the best men detailed to the work, but the secret police responsible to the crown alone have been urged to do their utmost.

England's position, as a political refuge, to a certain extent, is believed to eliminate the possibility of outrages, but at the same time King George is determined to take no chances, as he feels personally responsible for the rulers who come to honor his father.

The Dowager Empress of Russia, sister of Alexandra, arrived in London to-day, accompanied by Grand Duke Alexander Mitchevich. They were met by King George and Queen Mary. The final scene in Edward's coffin took place to-day in the throne room at Buckingham Palace after a few of his personal friends and several of the ministers had viewed the late King for the last time.

Ancient figures strutted the modern streets of Windsor to-day in the continued ceremonies of proclaiming George V. ruler of Great Britain and her dominions. While the royal salute was fired at Windsor park, George was royally proclaimed at three places within the city—St. George's chapel, royal arch and Windsor castle, at Victoria statue and at Windsor bridge.

George's message to the Commons, delivered through the Premier, was read to-day by the Deputy Speaker. The message follows:

Message from New King.

"The King knows that the House of Commons shares in the profound and deep sorrow which has befallen His Majesty by the death of His Majesty's father, the late King, and that the House entertains a true sense of the loss which His Majesty and the State have sustained by that grievous event.

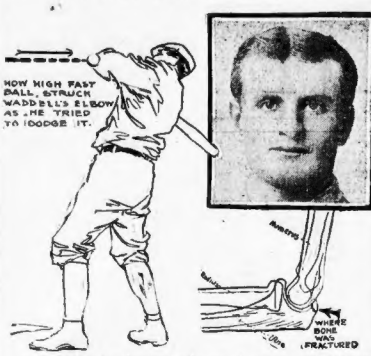
"King Edward's care for the welfare of the people and his skill and prudent guidance of affairs, his unswerving devotion to public duty during his illustrious reign, his simplicity and courage in peril and danger, will long be held in honor by his subjects at home and by all peoples of seas."

In the Commons the Premier moved that a humble address be presented to His Majesty, assuring the heartfelt sympathy of the House, and reading:

"We shall ever remember with grateful affection the zeal and success with which the late sovereign labored to consolidate in peace the worth and to add to every merciful endeavor by the alleviation of human suffering and the extension of peace and freedom all ranks and classes of his subjects.

"We beg to offer His Majesty our loyal congratulations upon his accession to the throne and to assure His Majesty of our devotion and sincere conviction that his relations will, under the favor of Divine Providence, be distinguished by unswerving efforts to promote the virtue, prosperity and contentment of the realm and to guard the rights and liberties of His Majesty's faithful people."

WADDELL HIT BY BALL, OUT OF GAME SIX WEEKS WITH BROKEN ELBOW



Rube Waddell and diagram showing how his arm was broken in game with the Red Sox.

Rube Waddell, the brilliant left-handed pitcher of the St. Louis Americans, it was learned to-day, had his left arm broken yesterday in the game with the Red Sox at the Huntington avenue grounds. The injury is a serious one and will keep the star player out of the game for at least six weeks.

Dr. H. W. Goodall of the Harvard Medical School, who had the injured player examined after the game with an x-ray machine, said to-day:

"I found that Waddell had received a fracture of the left elbow joint. One bone was badly fractured. He will be kept from the game for six weeks."

The injury was caused by a swiftly pitched ball from the hand of Eddie Cicotte, the Red Sox twirler. The ball was on in-shoot and Waddell, who bats right-handed, raised his left arm to shield his face. The ball hit him on the tip of the elbow, usually referred to as the funny-bone. The player was knocked down, but it was not supposed that he was so badly hurt at the time.

Waddell was the first of the players down stairs to-day at the Copley Square Hotel. His injured arm was in splints and carried in a sling.

May Go to St. Louis.

"Yes, I got a fracture," he said. "That is what the doctor told me, and I'll be out of the game for a while. But I'll be all right again, I hope, in a few weeks."

It is probable that Waddell will go back to his home in St. Louis for recuperation.

Waddell is one of the best drawing cards in baseball, his stunts on and off the diamond keeping him constantly before the public. He figured in more extra inning games than any player of his time. The best game of his career was pitched in Boston on July 4, 1905, when he was opposed by Cy Young in a twenty-inning contest which Philadelphia won, 4 to 2. Rube twirling for the Athletics.

Put Out by a Joke.

During his career Waddell has suffered from many accidents, but none as serious as the present one. In 1905, while with the Athletics, Rube started some "fun" in the train leaving Boston, trying to break Andy Coakley's straw hat. Coakley saw him coming and threw a suitcase at him. The bump he received and the cold he contracted from cooling off on the platform gave him a case of rheumatism in his pitching arm which put him out for the balance of that season.

In 1906, while riding in Philadelphia, the driver attempted to turn in front of a heavy wagon with disastrous results. When the dust flew out of the wreck it was found he had broken the thumb of his left hand. He was out of the game for five weeks. While a member of the Browns in 1907, he fell down a flight of stairs in Sparta, Ill., breaking two ribs.

SAYS STOVE POLISH CAUSED WIFE'S DEATH

Mathew Gateley is suing Taylor & Percival, a Waltham firm, for $15,000, charging that a preparation purporting to be stove polish, which his wife, Mrs. Catherine Gateley, had purchased at the defendant's store, was in reality naphtha, and that she died from burns received while attempting to black the kitchen range with it. According to the plaintiff's statement of the case Mrs. Gateley had a fire on Cherry street, Waltham, started to black the stove with the polish, but as soon as she applied the preparation to the front part of the stove it caught fire.

TRUCE REACHED IN RATE WAR

WASHINGTON, May 11.—After the Interstate Commerce Commission had consented to act as arbitrator of the controversy between the eastern railroads, involving import traffic rates from Boston, New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia, the commission suggested, pending the actual arbitration, the rates from the ports of Boston Philadelphia and Baltimore be the same. The agreement reached is in the nature of a compromise that will make for a readjustment of the rates on the westbound imports traffic.

ESCAPES BY JUMP FROM TRAIN WINDOW

While being taken to the Concord Reformatory, Alonzo Martin of Woburn, jumped through the window of a moving train which was running at a thirty-mile rate, and escaped. He was in charge of a Woburn policeman who permitted him to go to the toilet room just before he jumped.

Martin apparently escaped without injury, as the police in all the towns adjoining the railroad searched for him, but could get no trace of him.

The commitment was Martin's second each being on the charge of larceny, for this instance he was found guilty of stealing $25 from the premises of Mrs. A. W. Everberg of Woburn.

AUTO PACE LED TO SANITARIUM

NEW YORK, May 14.—The meteoric motoring career of William A. Stanley has ended with a record of $50,000 spent on automobiles in one year, a machine smashed to smithereens in his latest speeding spurt, a wife in financial difficulties and Mr. Stanley himself a patient in River Crest Sanitarium, on Long Island. The finely furnished apartments of the Stanleys in the Dakota, are to let and Mrs. Stanley is trying to obtain the consent of the River Crest physicians to have her husband released so that he may obtain for her part of the large fortune which he says is coming to him from England.

BEAUTY QUARTET WILL WAR SETTLED

CHICAGO, May 11.—The famous Dean will case, a legal battle in which Mrs. Suzanne Ella Wood-Dean, widow of John R. Dean, millionaire insurance man, fighting for her dower interest in the $1,400,000 Dean estate, has been arraigned in court by the other three ex-stenographers, the so-called "American beauty quartet," has been settled. Mrs. Suzanne Ella Wood-Dean is to be paid $200,000 by the executors of the Dean estate. Mrs. Dean relinquished all dower rights in the estate of the dead millionaire, including the Dean homestead.

FASTING GIRLS STILL HOLD FIRM

NEW YORK, May 11.—Still firm in their resolve not to let solid food pass their lips, and ignoring the pleadings of their family and friends to eat, ments of some kind, the three young women of Garden City, L. I., who have started to fast for seventeen days, were to-day found in jovial mood and evidently enjoying the experience. Miss Ann Townsend, Miss Marion McKellar and Mrs. Keith Trask are the three who have determined to prove that medicines are the worst cure for indigestion.

HIBBARD HOPE FOR PLUM GONE

The Civil Service Commission to-day sent notice to City Hall of its approval of the appointment of Dr. Francis X. Mahoney as Health Commissioner, but it never said a word about former-Mayor George A. Hibbard's appointment as City Collector.

It was regarded at City Hall as being the death-blow to the Hibbard chances. The Civil Service Commission holds regular meetings Tuesdays and Fridays. The time limit on the Hibbard appointment expires to-night. At yesterday's meeting the Mahoney appointment went through. If any approval was voted of the Hibbard appointment, the commission gave no hint of it to-day in the letter it sent to City Clerk John T. Priest regarding the Mahoney appointment.

Dr. Francis X. Mahoney who is to succeed John Ritchie, Jr., as Health Commissioner, will draw $4,000 a year. Mr. Ritchie has been acting ever since May 1, pending the appointment and confirmation of his successor on the Health Board.

WOMAN ASKS SHARE OF HOE FORTUNE

NEW YORK, May 11.—A mysterious claim for $150,000 has been brought against the estate of the late Robert Hoe, ing princes manufacturer by Margaret Johnson Johns Brown of London, Eng.

An attempt was made before surrogate Thomas by Mrs. Brown to establish her claim at once in order to enforce immediate payment, but after hearing Attorney Edward G. Pringle for the executors of the late estate, the court decided that no summary order for payment will be issued.

LEGISLATIVE PROBE OF RAILROAD FIRES

The Senate has adopted an order calling upon the Railroad Commissioners to report to the next legislature the how fires along railroad lines may be prevented.

ELOPED, NOW ASKS DIVORCE

"Don't elope," says Mrs. Louise M. Kickham, nineteen years old, of No. 5 Fountain street. She eloped to Providence in 1907 with John C. Kickham. In the Suffolk County Divorce Court to-day she asked Judge Pierce to be freed.

"I had known Mr. Kickham but a short time when we eloped to Providence and were married," testified Mrs. Kickham. "We went to live in South Framingham. Five months after our marriage my husband said he wanted to take a trip, so he went away. I did not see him again for nineteen months."

Mr. Husband told me he was a stenographer, but shortly after we were married in 1907 I learned that he was a professional gambler," testified Mrs. Nellie Eole of No. 27 Cherry street, who asked for a divorce from Louis Eole on the ground of cruelty. The cases were taken under advisement.

CINCINNATI GREETS WORLD'S CLUBWOMEN

CINCINNATI, May 11.—More than 8,000 clubwomen representing organizations in all parts of the world are modified in Cincinnati to-day in readiness for opening to-night of the tenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The assemblage is declared to be more thoroughly representative of the social womanhood than ever before has been seen in an American city. The clubwomen got together for the first time and became acquainted at a complimentary reception held by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra. This afternoon the Ohio Federation members were hostesses at a reception to the visiting delegates at the Hotel Sinton.

At the opening of the convention Governor Judson Harmon and Louis Schwab, Mayor of Cincinnati, will welcome the delegates. James R. Garfield, former secretary of the interior, will address the convention.

ALIENS CARE BEST FOR CHILDREN

NEW YORK, May 11.—That parents of foreign birth make the most successful father and mothers among the poor of New York is disclosed by a careful investigation in infant mortality on the upper East Side, just completed by the physicians and nurses of the Free Outdoor Maternity Clinics, to which John S. Berwin recently gave a large endowment. The statistics demonstrate, in the opinion of physicians, that the reduction in infant mortality in recent years is largely due to the influx of a foreign population.

"Then you can see no similarity in this movement to the combinations of the cotton planters or the tobacco raisers?" Mr. Parker was asked.

BALLOONISTS NEAR DEATH IN FALL TO EARTH

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., May 11.—After one of the most thrilling flights in the history of American aeronautics, in which they were confronted with death by extreme cold and a long fall, A. Holland Forbes, the famous balloonist, and J. Carrington Yates, his companion, are in a critical condition to-day in a farm house near Center, Ky.

They landed just outside the town when their balloon, Viking, crashed to the earth after they had desperately tried to stave off the disaster.

Their coming to earth was probably the most sensational of any balloon tour in many years.

Both men had become unconscious from the long trip and the fact that they had thrown away th[illegible]od many hours before and had [illegible]e water bottle which the supposed t[illegible]do them at least three days' service in the air. It was four hours before they regained consciousness and the first words uttered by Mr. Forbes were:

Landed in the Mountains.

"Wire the New York Times that Forbes is down to earth," and then he sank back and said nothing more for another hour.

The place of their descent was a farm near Center, in Metcalf county, Kentucky, about twenty miles from here and in a mountainous district. The balloon was seen in the air near Glasgow. Onlookers gazed through a field glass, but no sign of life could be discerned. Later a farmer came into town and reported that it had come down near Center, and that the aeronauts were unconscious. The aeronauts are still in such a dazed condition as to be unable to give any detailed account of their experiences.

Forbes Lahm Cup Holder.

The two men were taken to the home of a farmer and a physician was called. Forbes regained consciousness to a slight degree and told in a dazed fashion of having started out in an attempt to reach New York.

Mr. Forbes is the holder of the Lahm cup. He and his companion ascended Monday night in the Viking from Quincy, Ill., with the avowed intention of breaking the long-distance balloon record. The balloon rose 5,000 feet and floated slowly southward.

It was reported later sailing over Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. The balloon Viking is said to be the largest in existence, having a gas capacity of 85,000 cubic feet.

NEW HAVEN AFTER TRAIN GAMBLERS

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 11.—An order has been issued from the headquarters of the New Haven road notified conductors and brakemen on the system to keep a close watch for gambling. It was learned that a special detail of the railroad police is now covering some of the best trains on the system in an effort to subdue the professionals, and some of the best men who know the professional gamblers in this section are doing the work.

N. Y. STATE FAIR WANTS ROOSEVELT

ALBANY, May 11.—The following invitation was cabled to Theodore Roosevelt at Berlin to-day by Lieutenant-Governor White as president of the State Fair Commission: "New York State Fair Commission extends congratulations and invites you to attend State fair, week September 11."

NELLIE POST WHO WILL WED A KING'S GROOM

TO MARRY AN EARL'S NEPHEW

LONDON, May 11.—An Anglo-American engagement of great interest is that of Miss Helen, better known as Nellie Post, the daughter of Lady Barrymore by her first marriage to the late Arthur Post, of New York, to Montagu Eliot, groom-in-waiting to the King. It was first announced in 1908, then denied. Now it is confirmed and the wedding will take place probably in July at the Chapel Royal.

The reason why the engagement was not heretofore confirmed was the serious state of the health of Lady Barrymore, who is a daughter of the late General James Wadsworth, of New York, but now her health, after a trip to South Africa, has greatly improved.

Miss Eliot is a nephew of Lord St. Germans, and is a distinguished looking and peculiar spectacle. Mrs. Post is very popular and a favorite of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

The engagement of Miss Post leaves the Princess Patricia of Connaught the last of that coterie of girls who, four years ago, were the belles of the season. The Crown Princess of Sweden, then Princess Margaret of Connaught, Mrs. John Ward and Lady Innes-Ker were the others.

THE EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far of any daily newspaper in Boston and over 200,000 more than the next highest evening paper, and 75,000 more than all the other Boston evening papers combined. Circulation books open to all.

TWO WOMEN ESCAPE LYNN PEST HOUSE

Two women patients made their escape from the Lynn contagious hospital on Holyoke street by dropping from the bathroom window to the ground, ten feet below, and were not found for an hour and a half. They were Mrs. Bessie Bachelder, twenty-one, of No. 41 Market place, and Miss Maude Robertson, twenty, of No. 12 Bowman avenue. This was the second escape from the hospital within a fortnight, a ten-year old boy making the other break for freedom in practically the same manner.

COMFORTABLE PLACE FOR CLUB WOMEN

Club women and lodge women of Boston and New England now have at their disposal for meetings an attractive apartment provided for such purpose on the fourth floor of the Henry Siegel Company's store. Table, chairs and other appointments are handled there. The room may be engaged in advance by applying at the office of the superintendent of the store. It will be reserved for any hour on any week day that it is desired by any organization of women in New England. Club and organization affairs may be freely discussed by the women in strict privacy, such as they would have in their own homes.

EARTH GOING INTO TAIL OF COMET MAY 18

One week from to-day the earth will pass through the tail of the comet. Scientific men, as well as persons not versed in the sciences of chemistry, meteorology and astronomy, are figuring out what will happen. Most of the scientific authorities agree that the average mortal will tread the surface on that day as if neither the comet nor its tail were anywhere within reach. Few expect a few phenomena of different kinds, though.

Dr. Robert W. Wilson, professor of astronomy at Harvard, told the Boston Scientific Society in a lecture that a possible darkening of the atmosphere, or a pinkish glow due to meteorites 1-25,000th of an inch in diameter, with a possible irregularity in the wireless telegraph waves, will be the only tangible evidences of the tail's sweep across our sphere.

The meteorites will resemble the glow of a swarm of fireflies seen in a distance of 100 miles, in the opinion of Dr. Wilson. The cyanogen, which astronomers, or some of them, at first feared would poison the earth's atmosphere, he said, is found only a little way from the comet's head, and it will not be appreciable as the tail passes by.

After the passing of the tail the comet should be seen slowly in the evening skies from May 20 to May 22, after which it will grow fainter as it rushes away from our neighborhood.

I Love My Sleep, BUT OH, YOU COMET!

THE COMET is to be blamed for a heavy storm encountered by the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which arrived yesterday from Bremen. Miss Jeanne Dale, one of the passengers, declared that she had a vivid dream about the comet when the storm first began, and it so alarmed her that she refused to let fellow-passengers. The chief steward said that Schiaparelli, the jet cabin cat, had seemed dismal and unhappy all the way across.

THE COMET is responsible for the most extraordinary weather Paris has known in years, though some of the French attribute it to the lime, smoke, or red moon, covering a period that corresponds roughly with that which in August is supposed to be under the stormy influence of the "dog days." Proof, Dostandre of the University of Dijon finds a reappearance of cyanogen, the poisonous gas which was observed in Manitoba in February.

THE COMET evidently was responsible for an explosion of nitroglycerin stored in a magazine at Bargeton-sur-Seine, fourteen miles from Pittsburg, which caused the death of an all-round shooter, Frank McCullough. At McDonald the explosion ran from their homes, some shouting that Halley's comet had struck the earth.

THE COMET won't be visible to the naked eye after the morning mist, shortly after May 18, according to Ernest R. Moulton of the University of Chicago. The heavenly visitor will remain in view a few days later in the western sky shortly after sunset.

THE COMET was probably the sword that hung over Jerusalem before its fall, according to the calculations of Dr. Jones, when astronomer, E. C. D. Crommelin, in a lecture at London.

THE COMET will be watched at a corner party held by the Bergen Point Social Club of Bayonne, N. J., to-morrow evening on the top of a tall building.

SHARPENS RAZOR BLADES.

It isn't necessary to throw your dull safety razor blades away any longer. Take them to P. H. MacNeil, 169 Congress street, corner of Franklin, and have them resharpened by the Keen-edge Electric Process that makes they stand the hair test and are better than when new. Mr MacNeil has built up a tremendous business during the past few years and his sharpening of dull safety razor blades for two and a half cents each has brought the shaving problem down to a minimum.

That Suit at $15

There's a feeling of pleasure and satisfaction when you wear this suit.

It won't lose its lines of beauty or shapeliness after a few weeks of wear like other $15 Suits. Its edges will never pucker, nor will its front break.

Forty-three hand processes go into "That Suit at $15." There is more hand work in this suit than any $15 suit on the market, and as much as most $30 suits receive.

"That Suit at $15" will look as well on you in three months as it does the day you buy it.

If $15 is your price for a suit, by all means see "That Suit at $15." You'll say you wouldn't expect more value than we give you in this suit if you were paying $25 instead of $15.

See window display of the Forty-Three Hand processes of "THAT SUIT AT $15." It's interesting and instructive

AUTOIST RESCUES WOMAN FROM TIDE

An unidentified automobilist saved Mrs. Margaret O'Brien of South Boston from drowning when, while engaged in digging clams on the flats of Dorchester bay, she fell in a swoon and lay unconscious in the path of the incoming tide. The automobilist saw her fall, halted his machine to see if she arose, and after waiting a sufficient interval jumped from his machine, and ran across the flats to the prostrate form.

The woman was still unconscious when the man reached her. He picked her up and struggled toward shore. Once ashore the man left Mrs. O'Brien in the care of her son, and, climbing into his machine, sped away without a hint of his identity.

'BEST FRIEND OF AN INDIAN IS DRAMATIST'

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

The redskin's best friend is the dramatist, from whose gripping pen flow Indian virtues that are never denied could exist. Robert Edeson was both author and actor at the Colonial Theatre last evening, and you may assure yourself at the start that "Where the Trail Divides" gave poor Lo much the best of it in the matter of worldly morals and personal habits, but was rather tardy in yielding quarter readily. As an author Mr. Edeson gave the Indian a glimpse of happiness merely to insensify his subsequent bitterness.

Mr. Edeson's return to the role of an educated redman did not fail to arouse interest, for the delicious evenings we spent with "Strongheart" are still within the call of memory. Mr. Edeson's Mauwehasa sor, to make it easy to remember, lives indoor, moved a step closer to the altar than Strongheart, and by it his despair was all the more acute.

Only Indian, After All.

Four months of married life taught Bess Landor that an Indian, after all, was just an Indian—a son of the hills and the great outdoors. It didn't take long for the loneliness of Landor's ranch in a remote corner of South Dakota to get in its deadly work on the girl. Virtue, nobility and every manly quality known to the playwright's art, when working on an Indian subject, failed to keep Landor in her heart. She couldn't stifle the longing for the companionship of her own kind—white people. So Landor, with an overwhelming love that was never felt East of the Mississippi, at last, turned his wife over to the half-breed would rescue her starving soul.

Clayton Craig was a regular Apollo in the morning citizen of Broadway, and Bess edited him for only a short time. Then he turned her adrift.

Edeson Gets Dangerous.

But Mr. Edeson's How Landor was a high class Indian, and Craig had been warned to make Bess happy or take the consequences. Landor, called back from his seclusion on a reservation by a friend, was told of Craig's conduct and of the death of Bess.

Mr. Edeson, for the first time in the play, looked dangerous. There was the rumble of thunder in his face and you did not have to guess what happened to Craig. The thoughtful stage director turned out the lights and the crash of crockery told the story of Craig's swift departure into the dreary, unknown future.

Through it all Mr. Edeson had your sympathy. You suffered with him for the rough road he laid out for himself in "Where the Trail Divides." He might have arranged a smoother journey. Always vigorous and straightforward, he gave Landor strong arms and high principles, which kept the audience friendly—as audiences always are when grim melodrama takes hold of things.

Bob Manning Well Played.

A bright spot in the performances was the Bob Manning of George W. Barnum, whose work was uniformly strong and well done. Menifee Johnstone, as Clayton Craig, might have been a villain in a Theodore Kremer manuscript of crime and emotion—he had all of the signs.

Rose Tapley was not convincing as Bess, and it was plain that she was making hard work of the role. Mary Hall and Miss Cordelia MacDonald were the principals in the secondary manner that let in a little sunshine, and Joseph Rowley, as Pete Keeney, the bad man of the piece, died like a dead shot.

In "Where the Trail Divides" Mr. Edeson proved that a good Indian doesn't have to be a dead one.

THE PRISONER—By TAD

STATEMENT BY ACCUSED BOARD

The Middlesex County Commissioners today issued a statement explaining their position in regard to the recently published attack upon them. They say the committee which received charges against them did not give them a copy of the charges. They say they have no reason to know what these charges may be. The commissioners are Levi E. Gould of Melrose, Charles S. Richardson of Lowell and Chester B. Williams of Weymouth.

They say they have not been summoned to appear before Attorney-General Malone. The full statement issued to-day is as follows:

"The Board of County Commissioners are willing to rest their case on the statement that no illegal act has been done," says the statement. "Whether we have always been correct in our judgment is not for us to say. But all of our accounts have been gone over by the controller of county expenditures, and after going over them for months two or more times a year he has found them to be correct and has affixed his signature, which is now in the office of the county treasurer.

"So far as specific charges are concerned, we know nothing of them. We have been served with no papers. The committee has not been courteous enough to send us a copy of the charges."

$1,480,000 LEFT BY THORNDIKES

The wills of Charles T. Thorndike and his wife, Mary F. Thorndike, of Nahant and Boston, were probated to-day at Salem. Mr. Thorndike died of pneumonia April 8, and the following day his wife died of the same disease. His estate is estimated at $940,000 and her estate at $640,000, or a total of $1,480,000.

Dr. Augustus Thorndike of Beacon street, Boston, is executor for his mother, and Francis C. Welch of Boston, executor for Mr. Thorndike.

The will of Mr. Thorndike leaves $300,000 outright to his son, Dr. Augustus Thorndike, and the residue is left to trustees to pay the income to other beneficiaries and their heirs, and twenty years thereafter. If after twenty years all issue is extinct, the principal is to go equally to Harvard College, Industrial School for Destitute and Crippled Children and the House of the Good Samaritan, Boston, in each case the fund is to be named after Augustus Thorndike, M. D.

The will of Mrs. Thorndike is the same as her husband's, and the only public bequest after twenty years, is to the Industrial School for Destitute and Crippled Children.

The volcano Poas, nineteen miles from San Jose, shows signs of eruption. Earth tremors continue.

HOW TO CURE PIMPLES

It is truly remarkable how Cadum, the new skin remedy, causes pimples to disappear. The very worst cases are frequently cured in a week, and often in even less time. Cadum causes pimples to dry up and fall off, leaving the skin as soft and smooth as a baby's. Pimples are a disease of the skin, and are not caused by bad blood, as many people suppose. Cadum cures these annoying and disfiguring facial blemishes because it can be applied direct to the trouble, and its soothing, antiseptic and healing powers stop the itching at once. Cadum is just as efficacious in other skin troubles, such as blackheads, blotches, rash, eruptions, acne, eczema, etc. 10c. and 25c. all druggists.

PLANT SHUT DOWN IN WAR WITH UNION

Three machinists out of sixty-four employed by the Peerless Machine Company, Binford street, South Boston, manufacturers of shoe machinery, entered the plant to-day. A police sergeant and two policemen stood at the gates. There was no sign of disorder.

Within the factory was posted a notice stating that the plant would not be operated to-day, that all of its former employes were discharged, but that the firm was willing to re-employ them as individuals.

The rapid organization of the machinists all over Greater Boston gave rise to the probable at the Peerless factory. Two weeks ago the Machinists' Union gave notice of a demand for higher wages. Since then 2,000 members have been taken in, among them sixty-one of the Peerless Company's employes.

Business Agent Frank Jennings of the Machinists' Union charges that the company began to discriminate against its union employes. It is said that seven men prominent in the organizing of the employes were discharged. Jennings gave the firm until to-day to re-employ them. The result was the posting of the notices discharging all employes.

Business Agent Jennings said that if the Peerless Company did not take back its former employes within forty-eight hours he would find work for them elsewhere.

BOSTON MEN PRAISE BOY SCOUT PLAN

The American Boy Scout movement is to be inaugurated in Boston in the near future. Already, at the suggestion of the BOSTON AMERICAN, prominent citizens of Boston, especially those interested in the welfare of American boys, are discussing the movement, and in a short time plans will be laid for a Greater Boston movement in behalf of the youngsters. From Boston the movement will spread into surrounding towns and cities.

The purpose of the American Boy Scout movement is to discipline American lads mentally, morally and physically, making the work upon the boys' innate love of military, and through it, engendering in the boys a generous patriotism and charity, a love of nature through outdoor and athletic exercises, and inculcating in him a higher morality and honor, through love of country, obedience to his superiors and fealty to the Constitution and the Flag.

The movement has already been launched in New York, at a meeting of representative citizens, at the request of William Randolph Hearst. Among those taking an active interest in the movement are: Superintendent of New York Schools Dr. W. H. Maxwell, William Randolph Hearst and Howard Bradstreet, General George W. Wingate, Dr. Luther M. Gulick, E. M. Robinson, International secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; James E. Sullivan, of the Amateur Athletic Union; Henry Clews, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Nathan Straus, Sol. H. Guggenheim and Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles.

Following the co-operation of leaders in various fields of endeavor in Boston will come the work of the boys to help in the American Boy Scout movement. Boston boys are requested to call on the lookout for the BOSTON AMERICAN'S news regarding the progress of the campaign.

Any measure that tends to benefit the boys, youth and young men of our country, is a national benefaction. The very selection of the brightest of republics depends upon the character, integrity and patriotism of its citizens.

"It will endure just so long as the high standard of our fathers, who founded the government, and all those who have upheld it maintain it since, is revered and perpetuated."

Sixty-eight Methodist Episcopal Churches from the Charles river to the Connecticut river will have simultaneous services daily for three weeks in October. This was arranged at the meeting of the Methodist ministers of Boston in Temple Street Church. Rev. John Galbraith urged the meetings upon the ministers, and a committee was appointed, of which the Rev. George W. King, D. D., of Peoples Church, is chairman.

The Rev. Charles H. Stackpole of Waltham said:

"I know of a church that was newly painted and renovated, and they were afraid anything like an evangelistic meeting would spoil the paint."

WAGON KILLS CHILD UNKNOWN TO DRIVER

Unconscious of the fact that a heavy furniture van which was being driven by him had crushed out the life of James W. Beach, five years old, son of Mrs. Annie Beach of No. 108 Highland avenue, Malden, Robert G. Graham of No. 63 Fairmont street, Malden, returned to the scene a few hours later and heard of the accident. He was arrested on a charge of manslaughter by the Malden police, but was bailed out. According to witnesses, the Beach child caught hold of the bar between the front and rear wheels and when he attempted to let go the rear wheel struck him and passed over his body.

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

DESHLER-MURPHY BOUT AT ARMORY IS CALLED DRAW

MURPHY MAKES HIT OF CAREER BY GETTING A DRAW IN DESHLER BOUT

Eddie Murphy, the South Boston scrapper, made the hit of his career last night by going to a draw decision with such a clever ring artist as Dave Deshler at the Armory A. A., and if the fans who thronged the ringside had been following the word the hard hitter from the Peninsular district would have walked out of the ring the victor, be made such a favorable impression, but the judgment of Referee Flaherty could hardly have been improved upon and according to his observation it was impossible to pick a winner after they had traveled the twelve rounds.

Deshler started off like a sure winner, cutting the pace so fast that Murphy was completely overshadowed by his speed, but this burst of ginger did not continue after a few rounds, when Dave got a slip over the eye that started the claret flowing all over his visage, for he seemed to lose his famed cleverness and Murphy, who is as strong as a young bull and noted for his hard hitting, began to score with great frequency, causing Deshler to fall over in his fast stepping.

Deshler Got Big Lead.

From a losing long shot Murphy galloped along till he got the crowd with him by his constant improvement as the mill went along, and was landing heavily with both fists when the middle of the journey was in sight.

Deshler fought desperately to hold his early lead, never letting up in taking the fight to Murphy and making him do merry two-step around the ring to keep out of range of his lively moving mitts, but he could not escape that pounding left paw Deshler kept shoving into his face, yet the South Boston lad was game all the way through and never flinched under the shower of jabs that flattened his nose and shut off his vision. He was alert to all the openings that were in sight and slammed his glove on the body as Deshler charged in or drove terrific uppercuts to the law that could not be overlooked in the final reckoning and did much to cause Deshler to lose much of his cleverness.

Murphy Landed Hardest.

There was a solid impact when Murphy landed, leaving no doubt of the power and drive behind the shots as they crunched on Deshler's body. Deshler's blows were mere slaps beside what Murphy fastened on, and their weight in sapping the strength made a lot of difference as the entertainment went into the final sessions.

It was Murphy's effective uppercutting that plused Deshler, for he was punning into the punch and nearly wrecked the tattooed battleship that decorated his chest. "Walk the ship" were the cries buried at Murphy and seemed to urge him on, for he did his best to stove a hole in it.

Deshler's shifty left jab worked havoc with Murphy's chances before he could get a bead on his foe, but once he did find the pest that was plastering his features he showed a hand equally as speedy work countering Deshler in fine shape before it was done.

That Murphy should give such a veteran as Deshler as good as he could send, swung all the outside support to the younger battler who relished the wallop and was using it while the Cambridge boy, who never was known to possess a haymaker, had to depend on outboxing his rugged rival to keep in the game.

There was something doing every instant, as Deshler thrives on speedy work and Murphy, though not so loose jointed, was always gaining in action which counted to his credit. At the breakaway Deshler got a flying start and proceeded to smother Murphy by a whirlwind movement that would have bothered any fighter, no matter how classy he claimed to be. From corner to corner backed Murphy, driven by the showers of rights and lefts that were hurled at him. He covered up the best he could but it looked like a one-sided affair with Deshler the whole thing.

Deshler's Eye Split.

It was the same picture in the second round. Deshler rushing furiously and threatening to force Murphy beyond the barriers.

Something happened in the third round that favored Murphy. In one of his mad rushes Deshler had his right eye cut open and the claret flowed all over his features, interfering with his vision. It had the effect to slow Deshler up, for he lost much of his steam and this was just what Murphy was waiting for and he got more active, meeting Deshler with right uppercuts and swapping even with him in exchanges of left jabs.

They were banging away at the finish of the fourth at the bell in the fifth round and had to be pried apart by the referee. The rough work was all to Murphy's liking and for a couple of rounds he made his stock boom by sliding in hard rights to the body and pelting on the jaw that caused Deshler to fall off still more in his aggressiveness.

It was Deshler's turn to get blood when Murphy's eye was split in the ninth round and the latter was inclined to lay up till the bell.

Murphy gained in confidence as the bout wore along and in the eleventh round connected with a right cross that stood Deshler to his toes and made him stall a bit to recover, but he and the claret left soon in the whirlwind tried to sweep Murphy off his feet by the force of his rushes.

George Alger substituted for Billy Nixon to face Johnny Glover of South Boston in the semi-final bout of eight rounds and left the decision, though it was pretty even all the way through. Alger landed the stiffest punches, but Glover did all the leading and was the busy kid every minute while Alger was backstepping.

Young Parker and Kid Murphy of Lawrence went to a six-round draw, while Young Cassidy and Ralph Tuttle of Pawtucket went the route with the same result.

TRAINER MILAM SWEET ON COLT

Trainer Hugh Milam, who is conducting a public stable at Johnson Farm, is getting together a promising lot of youngsters that he will give a thorough trial to see whether or not they still do for their futurity engagements.

Hugh's particular pet is the black three-year-old colt Direction Regent, by Directum Kelly, 2:05¾, dam Regent's Last, dam of the Chamber of Commerce winner Reproachless, 2:04½, etc., by Prince Regent, 2:16. Hugh recently purchased this champion from T. H. Phair, Presque Isle, Me. He is a good-sized rugged built colt, much on the pattern of his sire. Hugh has not bothered 2:40 much with him as yet, but will give him a thorough sampling to see if he will do to start in the three-year old stakes in which he is engaged.

He also thinks well of Frank Holt's three-year-old filly Belle Todd, by Todd, 2:14¾, out of Belinda, 2:16¾.

The other members of his stable are Rebecca G., 2:16½, a two-year-old filly by Todd, dam by Baron Wilkes; a three-year-old filly by MacDougall, two-year-old filly by Todd, dam by Baron Wilkes and the six-year-old gelding by Bingen, dam Patchen Wilkes. One of the best looking things in the stable is a yearling filly by Cockato, out of Peggy, by Baron Wilkes, that is owned by John O'Connor.

FLINN LOSES TO LAVIN IN EIGHTH

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 11.—Paddy Lavin outclassed Cy Flinn here, the bout being stopped in the eighth round, when it was apparent that Flinn could not last much longer.

RED SOX HAVE SOUTHPAWS IN THEIR POWER

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

The Red Sox have now faced in succession the following left handed pitchers: Plank, Krause, Frill, Vaughn, Frill, Wadsell and Graham. The only time that was when they knocked Frill out of the box on Monday and got a few innings of Doyle. They may get Bailey today. It was the same last year, but Stahl and Wagner and Carrigan broke up the left handed combination and as the boys kept winning right along from left handers, the managers got tired of feeding the southpaws.

Now that Captain Lord and his players can hit left handers as well as they can right handers, but they doubtless get peevish over this continuous performance business. It is like having prunes and hash three times a day for six months.

In the third inning Hoffman led off with a single and Wallace banged a safety. In trying to catch Hoffman napping off second, Cicotte threw wild and the runners moved up to second and third. Foster was sent out and the Browns were one behind. They didn't score. Hoffman was caught on Gerigg's rap to Wagner and then both Cries and Schweitzer hit safely to Cicotte and were thrown out at first.

"Knuckles" from the crowd. Cheers for Joe. Now suppose the best Joe can do is second base? Suppose the Red Sox get men on second and third with two outs and Joe is needed to tie and suppose they were retired without a tally. Razz from the crowd, eh? You bet your life. It makes a difference, don't it?

The Red Sox have been outlucked many a time this season right on their home grounds, but certainly things came their way in a striking manner yesterday. Remember when Arellanes was caught leaving the bases full with only one man out? The Browns had scored a run and were only a tally behind. It was a ticklish position for Cicotte who relieved the Senor. Stone was up and a single would have meant two runs with two men still on bases and one out. Stone hit the ball an awful rap, but it went straight at Wagner who clung to the ball and ran to third base for a double play. That, I say, was baseball luck and for once this season the luck was with the Red Sox.

The Rube is a funny cuss. The outfielders played in for Jim when he came to bat in the fourth. He waved them back as though he was going to knock the cover off the ball and appeared surprised when Messrs. Speaker, Lewis and Hooper refused to back up.

A moment later Waddell received an awful crack in the elbow which put him out of commission. The run was very plentiful and Rube had the sympathy of all the players as well as the crowd.

Dufferylie, that part of the 25 cent bleachers nearest left field, cheered Duffey Lewis when he returned to his position for the opening of the eighth inning. He had just cracked out a two bagger that scored Gardner and he himself crossed the plate a moment later on Cicotte's sacrifice fly for two bases. Cicotte is getting to be the candy kid with the willow.

President Lynch's call down of Roger Bresnahan, though severe, is entirely in order. Bresnahan's reply suggests the idea that he is third on the calliope at which successful managers are made. A man who cannot control himself is not likely to be able to control others.

"Fred Clarke does not have any grandstand players," remarked a fan when Gibson, after being upset by a pitched ball, got up quickly and trotted to first base. "A star like Gibson could have won a big round of applause if he had acted the part of an injured hero for a minute or two. That crack must have pained him, but he did not make a job of it like others do.

During the Washington-New York game in New York, recently, Groom was pitching during one of the games for the Senators, and the Highlanders were hitting him pretty hard.

"Get that ball over the plate," someone on the Washington bench yelled at Groom as the New Yorks were pounding him the hardest.

"I can't" retired Groom, who is somewhat of a wit. "Whenever I get one started over they stop it."

GAY AUDUBON TROTS BEST MILE AT TRACK

Jim Gatsonis has set a stunt for the other Readville trainers who have three-year-old trotters with futurity aspirations by driving the chestnut colt Gay Audubon, by Audubon Boy (1:59½), out of the noted brood mare Gaiety Girl (2:15¼), dam of the futurity winner Gay Hugen (2:12½), a mile in 2:25, which is about ten seconds faster than any other colt of the year has been asked to step this season at the track.

The colt is entered in all the rich futurity stakes and his work will be watched with interest. Jimmy Brady, who had the colt last year, says that he is the fastest youngster that he ever handled. The colt cost his present owner $10,000 on the strength of the speed and class that he showed in his work last season.

MATTY GETS OFFERS.

Aleck McLean, manager of Matty Baldwin, has received two offers. The Akron, O., promoter wants Baldwin to meet Phil Brock on May 24, and the Milwaukee promoter wants him to box Al Wolgast June 6. McLean will likely accept the Milwaukee offer.

HYDE PARK TO PLAY U. S. LEAGUE TEAM

Manager Thomas Devine, of the new Hyde Park baseball club, has arranged a big series between his club and the Boston U. S. League team before the Bay State and U. S. League seasons open. On May 21 the Bostons will play Hyde Park at the new Readville ground at Readville, and on May 28 at Post Park, the Bostons have beaten Providence, Quincy and other fast clubs. Umpire Tom Duffy, of the N. E. League staff will officiate in the series.

CALLED A DRAW.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Fighting Kenady and Connie Schmidt boxed six fast rounds to a draw at Brown's gymnasium, in the semi-final Knockout O'Donnell bout Joe Ferguson in the third round.

CORBETT DUE IN JEFF CAMP

By H. N. WALKER.

JEFFRIES TRAINING CAMP, Rowardennan, Cal., May 11.—Unless his mind undergoes a change in the meantime Jim Jeffries will be one of the ringside spectators when Papke and Thomas line up in San Francisco next Saturday.

"I don't expect to serve as one of Papke's seconds," said he to-day, but I believe it is going to be a great fight and I'm anxious to see it."

If the present arrangements are carried out the big fellow will leave Rowardennan in an automobile early Saturday morning, reaching San Francisco shortly after noon. He will probably be accompanied by Jeffries.

A report sent out from the East that Jim Corbett would join the camp some time next week caused general rejoicing. Jeffries sets a high valuation on the veteran's judgment, and will probably be governed largely by the advice of the former pompadour champion.

Jeffries refused this morning to discuss the interview with Corbett, in which the latter is quoted as saying that a couple of round baskets were necessary to put him into first class condition.

The black eye handed him by Bob Armstrong has left a bad taste in the former champion's mouth and there has been a noticeable improvement in his boxing during the past couple of days. Jim, too, isn't a bear on criticism punishment, and the report sent out of his poor showing Monday don't set any too well.

JOHNSON NOW DOWN TO 220

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—John Arthur Johnson, champion heavyweight of the world, who is to defend his title against James J. Jeffries at the Emeryville race course July 4, has started training in earnest.

This morning he was up with the lark and did a ten-mile turn on the road, after which he returned to his quarters and had a rub-down.

Johnson was accompanied on the Marathon by his retinue of trainers. The pace was altogether too hot for his helpers, however, and one by one they dropped out. The big fellow showed no ill effects from the long journey beyond a slight soreness of the feet. It is apparent that the champion is much better condition than early reports indicated. Around his abdomen there is a suspicion of fat and he is probably a few pounds heavier than when last week here, but two weeks of hard work should put him in trim.

Tex Rickard returned to town to-day after a three-day visit at Rowardennan. He is enthusiastic over the condition of both principals to the big fight.

"Johnson's condition surprised me," said the Nevadan. "I had no idea he had kept himself in such fine shape while in Chicago. There ain't going to be much room for automobile training after all. At any rate we have proved to me whatever was responsible for it."

Harvard Athletic News

By W. E. BURTON

Little by little Harvard chances of winning the meet with Yale next Saturday are fading into the ethereal. No sooner did Guild and Steinhardt return to strengthen the Crimson's hopes than Sam Lawrence, Harvard's crack high jumper and winner in the pole vault against Dartmouth developed a serious case of break-down which yesterday necessitated his going home to rest up.

Lawrence has been perhaps the hardest working man on the Harvard track team this Spring. Not only has he had to keep up his own work in the high jump but he has to take Barr's place in the pole vault. Last Saturday in the Dartmouth meet after Lawrence had taken second place in the high jump, with a leap of 6 feet ½ inch, he turned directly around, picked up the pole and cleared the crossbar at an altitude of 11 feet 6 inches, winning this event. That incident alone illustrates his value to Harvard and what the Crimson will lose by his absence.

The result of this has been that Lawrence has worked himself out and has contracted grippe into the bargain. Yesterday he was so weak that he could scarcely clear 4 feet 6 inches in the high jump. Coach Quinn at once sent him home to recuperate. There is still a possibility that he may go into the Yale meet but the chance is rather slight.

"Lawrence will arrive in Boston at noon Saturday," said Coach Quinn. "If he has recovered by that time and is fit to enter the meet, he will be given a chance, but in his present condition little can be expected of him. Lawrence's absence will mean a loss of at least five points to Harvard in the Yale meet, and this is enough if everything else works well to turn the scale in favor of Yale."

Reid, Dennis and Smith are the only men Harvard has to take Lawrence's place in the high jump. None of these men at their best has ever gone over 5 feet 10 inches while Lawrence jumped 6 feet 1½ inches in the baseball cage early in the Spring. Harvard's chances of winning points in the High jump with either of the three second men can be judged by considering the fact that none of these men are thought good enough to be entered in the Intercollegiates.

Carr, Harvard's snappy shortstop, shows a tendency to fight the ball which Coach Pieper is trying to cure.

Potter, the second sacker who heads Harvard's batting list, is not so nifty in the field but seems at times to be rather grumpy in his pickups and throws.

Everybody in Harvard who has watched Reggie Foster, the sprinter, jog around the track in the last two days has a strong hunch that Foster will be found at the mark in the Yale meet when the gun cracks. Ponch Donovan is as definite as the Sphinx regarding this possibility but the Harvard track coach says that Foster "may" run. Donovan says he is giving Foster some light work now and if he responds into shape before Saturday he will be given a chance. The Fifty who are placing their simoleons on what they consider a sure thing may have to compute the ties back to New Haven if Foster lifts the cinders.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

WITH YOUR KIND PERMISSION, stacks up against the shifty Englishman, ladies and gentlemen, I will endeavor to give you an imitation of a man changing a Straight Dope column to a Straight Tip column. The word "dope" isn't even in the dictionary, but you all know what it means—or, at any rate, you all know what dopey means. I don't want to be classed with the dopey crowd. No more Straight Dope in this column. Straight Tip is my name. Having disposed of this somewhat weighty affair we will now, with your permission, pass along to the next cage.

HOW MUCH WOULD YOU BID FOR the film privileges of the Gotch-Zbyszco cancer again wrestling match? Out in Chicago they are actually offering $20,000 for the pictures. How they expect to get action in the pictures or out of the pictures is more than I know. I have never seen moving pictures of a wrestling bout, but they must be the limit for slowness. Some of these champ bouts go an hour or more without a fall. How would you like to be the man in the dollar seat and an hour of that sort of "moving" picture in front of you, with Sally Shapelylims next on the program? Please join be in that pathetic ballad entitled, "I May Be Crazy, but I Ain't No Fool."

IF I HAVE THE TIME AND THE price of a railroad ticket I shall certainly take in that bout between Pat Moore and Jem Driscoll. This go is set for May 23 in Philadelphia. Pal will sure get the tryout of his career when he

GOTCH WANTS BURNS TO HELP HIM TRAIN

CHICAGO, May 11.—According to word by Minneapolis, where Frank Gotch is making preliminary training for his battle with Zbyszko, the mat champion is dominant over the refusal of Jeffries to allow "Farmer" Burns to leave Rowdenham to come to Chicago.

Gotch is in earnest over having Burns by his train, and it is said that unless Jeffries changes his mind Gotch will send him at his training camp to help him prepare for his encounter with Johnson, the champion's manager, Emil Klaus, at last night for the Flour City, but he is going wired to Rowardenham that Burns would be expected in Chicago by May 17.

FORMER CHAMPION SWIMMER IS DEAD

CHICAGO, May 11.—It became known to-day that John Adolph Albert, former champion swimmer of the world over as a swimmer, was buried Monday at Oak Hills, at the age of fifty-six years. He was of German birth and best known for his swim in 1880 from Calais to Dover, a distance of thirty-two miles, which he negotiated in 19 hours 53 seconds. He also held the champion-ship of fire and ten miles. His first appearances in Chicago was during the World's Fair, where he did a high diving act, the height being 122 feet.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere—in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

Right Reading Is an Excellent Education

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

THERE are many mothers and fathers in moderate (or less than moderate) circumstances in the land who are wishing Mr. Carnegie had not bestowed so many free libraries on the people of America.

One of these mothers has asked me to help in correcting and reforming young girls who have contracted the "reading habit."

She thinks it a vice for poor girls.

Work is neglected; duties are forgotten, and obedience to parents ignored by certain young girls who find all their happiness in the books they procure from the library.

Whether this is a good or bad habit depends entirely upon the books selected. Continual pouring over novels, however high class they may be, is not the best thing for a young girl whose parents need her assistance in the household.

Most young girls are well endowed with romance, and novels feed the imagination and breed a restless discontent with the commonplace realities of their surroundings.

Remember she is not course taking for granted she has selected books worth while) obtaining an education by this love of reading.

Obtaining an Education.

History is the most exciting novel in the world of literature.

If she has not developed a taste for history, urge her to bring home histories of France and England, and to tell you about the romance and tragedy she will find in their pages.

It will brighten up your work-a-day life and give you a change of thought. And it may prepare your daughter to some day grace a larger sphere than the one she now occupies.

Oh, no, my dear madam, there is no vice in this love of books; it is a great virtue instead; and you must make yourself such a wise and good mother that your daughter will take delight in helping you with all your work before she turns to the books.

It is an easy thing to do if you go about it in the right way.

Learn to be that dearest thing on earth—a good, sympathetic, bread-minded, while firm and just mother.

Then you will find it easy to make your girl a good daughter.

Not Classed With Vice.

To reading any books which a good library affords is not a habit which can be classed with the vices, and not one which needs a cure; it is, instead, one which any wise parent will encourage and direct.

Tell your young daughter that you are pleased and proud over her taste for books; urge her to read slowly and carefully, and ask her to tell you what she reads, and to talk it over with you.

This will make her feel your sympathy and encouragement, and will make her amenable to your wishes in other matters.

Explain to her your desire to have her conscientious in her sense of duty, and tell her that you expect her to perform all her necessary tasks with scrupulous care and thoroughness before she sits down to her beloved books.

No real, lasting good ever came to a soul yet who violated a principle or neglected a duty to pursue an art or a study of any kind.

There is time enough in the busiest day to do a little reading if we manage the hours properly and waste no moments in "dawdling."

Tell your daughter to finish her work and to think of nothing else but her work while she is busy with her tasks; then help her in a quiet corner and hour and give her the books and show an interest in them.

Some girls pore over novels to the neglect of household work.

Mirandy Advocates Salaries for Wives

By DOROTHY DIX

"WELL, Brer Johnsing," says Brer Jenkins to Ike, de odder night, whilst he piled in de best bit'n'ful an' de chicken fixin's, when he dropped into our house for supper, "well Brer Johnsing," says he, "I see dat dem Suffertin' Vets in England are still up an' at hit."

"What dey been doin' now?" axes Ike, a-puttin' a little mo' of de dark meat on Brer Jenkins's plate.

"Why," says Brer Jenkins in a horrified voice, "one of 'em is done got her husband to introduce a bill into Parliament a-demandin' wages for wives."

"My," 'sclaims Ike, "what'll women be wantin' next!!"

"Hit's de most owdacious an' onreasonable thing I ever heard of," says Brer Jenkins wid a groan. "Hit's onreligious, an' a fytin' in de face of Providence."

"Wages for wives," says Ike wid a sigh, "ef dat don't beat Robfall."

"One by one dey takes away from us de reasons for gittin' married," spoms Brer Jenkins in a mornful voice. "An' while I ain't one of dem what links to prophesy evil, I is bound to prognosticate dat de day is comin' when a married man will be dat much of a curiosity dat we'll pay ten cents in de side show to have a look at him."

"Wages for wives," says Ike over again in a voice dat sorrowful dat I thought he was gwine to cry. "Wages for wives! Hit's tak after death, de judgment."

"Hit looks to me, Brer Johnsing," says Brer Jenkins, "dat women ain't got no appreciation of de holy estate, an' what a privilege it is to have a husband. Ef dey did dey wouldn't have de face to ax for pay for doin' de few little things dat dey does around de house."

"Dat's right," says Ike, "women don't know when dey's well off. Now, ef dey had to git up an' hustle lak me, dey might talk about wages. I has to wuk eight hours a day, wid just one hour off for my lunch."

Eighteen Hours a Day.

"Oh, dat ain't so bad," says I, "I puts in about eighteen hours a day, widout no time off for my meals. I'se been up a hour befo' you was, a cookin' yo' breakfast, an' after you gets down to smoke yo pipe I'll be a washin' up de dishes dat you done et yo' supper out of' an' sweepin' out de dirt dat you brought in wid you, an' whilst you stretches yo'self out to rest an' gab I'll be a puttin' a new patch on yo' ole britches."

"But what's dese all day while I'se been at wuk?" says Ike.

"Oh, nothin' much," spons I, "but I'se managed to pasa de time away by gittin' breakfast, an' cleanin' de house, an' gittin' de chilien off to school, an' seein' dat dey washed behind dere ears, an' blacked dere shoes, an' by washin' de baby a dressin' hit, an' by going' to market, an' doin' de washin' an' darning de socks, an' makin' little Teddy Roosterfelt a new shut-waist, an' fixin' de chilien's dinner when dey come home from school, an' cookin' supper, an' nows I'se ready to enjoy myself by settin' down to do about fo' hours' mendin'."

"All of hit women's wuk," says Ike lo a discontemptous tone.

"Dat's so," spons I, "but ef women's wuk warn't done de worl' would stop des as quick as hit would ef man's wuk warn't done, an' ef wuk's good enough to take, hit's good enough to pay for, yet all de pay dat a wife gits is her board an' clothes, an' she's expected to eat de necks of de chicken, an' to wear de made over clothes. You don't hear nothin' about a man puttin' a new ruffle on the tail of his best Sunder's coat to make hit long enough for dis Spring's fashions, nor does any news git out dat Brer Rhen has done painted his last year's hat wid shoe polish an' is gwine to wear hit agin dis year, but dat's what Brer Rhen's wife has done did, because Brer Rhen don't pay for his wuk, but Sh Sally, whut wuks twice as hard, don't find no pay envelope a-wukin' for her on Saturday night."

Why De Widowers Marry

"Sir Mirandy," says Brer Jenkins, a swellin' out his chist, "you is got de po', feeble, female intellect which is why you can't see dis subject of de right of wives to collect wages from de large, broad view dat a man takes of de subject."

"Maybe not," spoms I, "but I done look notice dat whilst a husband don't think dat his wife's wuk amounts to nothin' whilst she is alive, dat as soon as she is dead an' he has to go down into his pocket to pay somebody else to do dem few jobs what she turned off, dat he mostly lands in de po' house. De reason dat widowers is always in such a rush to git married is because bit's cheaper to be married to a woman dan bit is to pay for odder women dem de cookin', an' washin', and sewin', an' mendin', a-takin' care of his chilien. Most any able bodied woman can console a bereaved widower."

"Well," says Brer Jenkins, "I don't hold wid dis new-fangled doctrine of payin' wives wages. Look what we does for women! Don't we save 'em from bein' ole maids by marryin' 'em, an' let 'em wait on us?"

"Women an Ungrateful Lot"

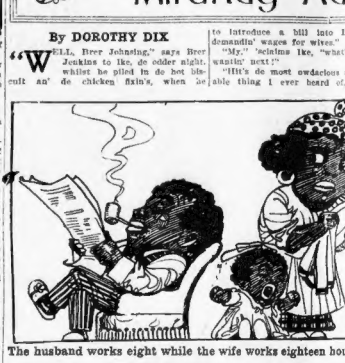
"Women is an ungrateful lot," says Ike, wid a groan.

"An' to think," says Brer Jenkins, a-holdin up his hands in horror, "dat a woman sins a satterdi no longer wid bein' married. She wants to draw a salary for holdin' down de job. Next thing we know dey'll want to have a prize give 'em for eatin' pie."

"Don't you worry none about wives ever bein' paid any wages," says I.

"Hows dat; you don't think dey's gwine to pass dat law?" axes Ike.

"I dont know 'bout dat," spons I, "but I does know dat dere ain't no woman livin' dat could ever collect her wages from her husband, no matter how much he owed 'em."



The husband works eight while the wife works eighteen hours a day

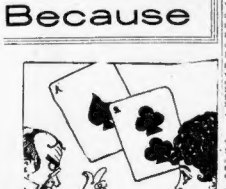
It's Always Just Because

By KENNETT HARRIS

YOU ask a man the reason why he stands upon his head,
Or puts black pepper in his eye, or paints his shoetops red,
He'll have a cogent reason pat that follows logic's laws—
But if you ask a woman that, she answers, "Oh, because."

I know just why I led out trumps. I wasn't such a chump.
I was convinced those other dubs would play the king or trump,
But when my wife, with smiling face, played as all rules forbid,
And I asked why she trumped my ace, she said, "Because I did."

I have no use for William Brown, my one-time friend, I own,
Because the skinflint turned me down about a measly loan.
My wife detests Jane Smith, I know, but when I seek a clue
To why she hates the lady so, she says, "Because I do."



I've got to have a new Spring suit. My old one's sadly worn,
And I'm not wholly destitute nor fond of jeers and scorn.
My wife has eight or ten in stock. I ask in deep disgust,
"Why must you buy another frock?" She says, "Because I must."

Once in a while I'm hopping mad because I've mashed my thumb,
And when the dinner's pretty bad, I'm sometimes rather glum;
But when, completely at a loss, I ask my Angel Lamb,
"Why are you so extremely cross?" she says, "Because I am."

Mysterious are woman's ways. I've puzzled long about
The lack of motive she displays and cannot make it out.
Why can't she tell the reason why? She doesn't, you will grant.
She doesn't even seem to try. I guess—because she can't.

The Folly of Trying to Live Things Over Again

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

ONE of the most pitiful facts in life is that you can't "live things over." You can't go back. Nothing is ever twice the same.

Every one has longed to live over some particular day or hour, planned for it, arranged that all the conditions should be the same—and yet found it all so different.

And then you wonder why it is different. The place, the surroundings, your companion, may be the same—and yet you are vaguely disappointed. You wonder what it is that is lacking—why you cannot derive from it the same pleasure that you did.

It may be only a day at some Summer resort, or a trolley trip. You are with some one you care for, and it is a wonderful day. Then the next Summer you plan to repeat it. You arrange that every detail shall be as it was the season before.

You spend the day in exactly the same way. You take the same boat, see the same things, take dinner at the same hotel. Everything is the same—except the effect it has upon you. You may enjoy it—but not as you did the Summer before. You are constantly thinking of that day, and trying to get the same pleasure from it—but you can't. You may not admit it to your companion, or perhaps even to yourself, but in your heart you are sorely disappointed.

I think the desire to "live things over" is stronger in women than in men. Perhaps because they are more emotional, because sentiment plays a larger part in their natures, and because they are more tenacious in their memories.

One little woman that I know went to the expense of moving and redecorating an apartment, just to live over a situation, only to find the pitiful futility of her efforts!

It was in a little two-room apartment that she had spent the happiest month of her life. It was there that she met the man she loved. It was there he came to see her almost every evening and they talked and read and planned for their future. Every moment was filled with enchantment. After he would leave she would kneel down in gratitude that such a great happiness had come to her. And she would dream through the hours until he came again.

Then he was called away on business—six weeks, which seemed to her as many years—and he returned. In the meantime she had taken other rooms, as she had planned to do some time before.

But now everything seemed different. He loved her, that she knew. But it was not the same. The first great tenderness he had given her had gone. She strained after it in vain. She could not bring it back.

And then she conceived the plan of going back to the apartment—of surrounding herself with the same environment, hoping that that would help bring the same happiness.

Then she put on the same little gray gown she had worn there so much, and waited, her heart in her throat, for him to come. She felt that so much depended on the first moment—on the way he greeted her. He used always to stoop over and kiss her on the forehead, and for several seconds to hold her that way without words. And she wanted just that—the silence and tenderness of that greeting.

Here's How He Greeted Her

She waited tremulously. His ring at last! Her eyes were shining with expectancy. And his greeting was:

"Well, what on earth possessed you to come back here?"

He didn't mean to be cruel. He only didn't understand.

The experience left her a sadder but wiser little woman. She never again tried "to live anything over." She accepted the present as it was, without trying to renew the past.

It seems to be one of the inexorabilities of life—that we can't go back. We don't even hold to things as they are. We must ever go on to new experiences, new conditions. And I suppose that is the way of progress. And yet to those who cling to their memories it is sometimes very hard.

Since a child I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, liquids, and other cosmetic preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent a great deal of money on various things in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation which succeeded where all else failed.

This simple remedy, a harmless soluble liquid, enabled me permanently to find entire relief from all trace of unwelcome hair, and forever end my embarrassment. It is simple, safe, sure and can be used privately at home without fear of pain or blemish. It makes the electric needle entirely unnecessary.

I will tell in detail full particulars to enable any other sufferer to do the same happy way as I did privately at home. All free. Address CAROLINE HOOD, 113 C Old P. O. street, Providence, R. I.

Filene's — THE Best Cold Storage FOR FURS AND Garments

A Significant Fact

One of Boston's largest department stores receives in payment of its monthly bills more checks drawn on the Old Colony Trust Company than on all the other Boston banks and trust companies combined.

This is the strongest possible proof, not only of the value of our service to the individual depositor, but of the position which this institution holds among those who appreciate the many advantages and economies of a checking account.

"WHAT a beautiful thing a yacht is," she murmured, as she gazed about her and saw that the deck chairs, under the awnings, were upholstered in brocades of beautiful colorings and design.

"A fine yacht is a splendid toy," he drawled. "It seems to wear better than other things. One is able to carry his home around with him, and that is an advantage. I want to show you the saloon and then we can figure out just what will please us best for lunch. I have a splendid chef aboard. He is an artist. One needs an artist in cooking, after having had to eat every day for forty years. He makes it less of a bore, really he does. Sometimes you hardly realize that it is any bother to eat."

"Ah!" cried Frances, in delightful assent, as she entered the saloon and dropped from her lap, lingered there and looked up into her eyes.

"Frances!" he whispered, pressing close to her.

Before she could rise he had her in his arms, half-smothering her.

She struggled in vain. The man's blood was boiling within his veins.

"We'll not land to-night. We'll just sail on and on, and on to the end of the world, and back again," he whispered.

"Let me loose," she begged. "I am suffocating."

The first flush of color had left her cheeks, and beneath the rouge and powder the skin was bloodless.

"What's the matter of your staying where you are in New York, if you are to meet only poverty?" he asked. "You need the comforts and pleasures of life. Here you will have them. We shall go to the Mediterranean. A wire to him that you have gone will end the matter."

She freed herself from his clasp and went to the other side of the saloon. Once she felt a desire creeping that her being to cut and run from all trouble ashore and remain with Thorne there came tappings at her heart, also a little messenger from the days when idleness and effete living had not destroyed her sense of right and wrong. This little messenger asked her in a very thin little voice: "Have you any moral sense left? Is it ever too late to try to redeem one's self from past mistakes and offences?"

She never afterward hinted to any one what transpired at this moment, when the wars period before her, nor did ever any one come to know the fierceness of the struggle between the good and the bad in her heart.

Thorne felt that she was deciding, and he filled a glass and quaffed it in his excitement and expectation.

"I must leave this yacht," was her answer.

Thorne laughed.

"I Must Leave," She Repeated

"I must leave," she repeated. "You have been mistaken in me, and it is, perhaps, my fault, because, for a time, I thought I could amply protect myself. I'm not that kind of a woman, and—and—and you are going to be that kind."

Tears were flowing down her cheeks, and her ridiculous vanity arose at such a time, made her hastily dab her face with her handkerchief to prevent the rouge and enamel from becoming streaked.

"A bargain's a bargain, my dear madam," urged Thorne. "You gamblers play the game according to the rules. Come now, has my hand been dealt with marked cards?"

"I'll give you back your money as soon as we get ashore," she sobbed.

"I won't take it. The bargain has been made and I stand by it."

He advanced to her and she stepped backward to avoid him.

"Oh, not now!" she begged. "Not now—Suffers."

She gave a little hysterical laugh.

Frances knew that she was in the full power of the man, and that she would have to try to learn to play his game and trick.

Her changed attitude pleased Thorne.

"No haste," he said, gratified. "Let us see about the lunch."

He went to the electric button in the starboard side of the saloon. The way to the deck was clear. Frances darted for the door and unlocked it. freedom.

The wind was blowing her hair about her; she rushed up the companionway and finally to the piling beneath.

"Oh, Captain," she pleaded, "let me ashore. Mr. Thorne is trying to harm me. Captain, for the sake of your own wife and children, give me a chance to escape, or give me some protection. I'm a decent woman, Captain, and if you are a decent American sailor you won't let him harm me."

The Captain showed no surprise, as he turned over the wheel to his first officer. The thing had happened before, and this time, he told himself, was the last time it would happen with him in command.

"I'll see Mr. Thorne, madam," was all he said, but his face was red and his gray eyes seemed to spit fire.

"Andrews," he directed his first officer, "take the ship's launch and drop anchor off Poughkeepsie."

"Yes, sir."

"And the lady had better remain here with you."

"Yes, sir."

Thorne was already climbing the companionway to the pilot house.

"What's the matter?" demanded the captain.

"I'll look you on deck."

"What's the matter?" demanded Thorne angrily.

"Come into the saloon, I want you to sign my discharge papers. I've captain revolted Thorne bluntly. "I'm leaving the ship right here at Poughkeepsie, and this lady has appealed to me as a man to protect her. She is going ashore with me."

Thorne stormed and raged, cursed and swore a thousand different varieties of revenge. Then he cooled and urged, and coaxed and tried to bribe, but without success. The anchor chain rattled over the white sides of the Pleiades.

"There has been too much of this sort of business on this ship," said the captain. "I can't keep my self-respect any longer, and stay on her skipper. I'll take the lady ashore and come back for the tender for my belongings. You can get the kind of captain you want. There are lots of many of them, but I guess you can find one somewhere."

With that he left Thorne and went to Frances, escorting her over the side of the yacht to the launch.

"Now, madam," the captain said, as he landed her, "if you have any trouble call on the police. My jurisdiction ends here."

CHAPTER XIX.

THANKING God for His mercifulness in saving her from the last irretrievable step of her wanton career, Frances rushed to the Poughkeepsie station and boarded a train for New York. Womanlike, she had clung to her little gold mesh purse all the while she was on the Pleiades. She paid her railroad fare to the conductor, threw away his receipt check and settled down to plan for what she would meet when she reached home.

If she did have the scruple which saved her from betraying the faith of her absent husband, she had none about the money she had secured from Thorne. She was too far in the mire of debt to think more than once of returning him the cash he had advanced. She thought of it just that one time, and dismissed the thought with the false assurance that some day, when times were better, she would send it back to him.

She reached home an hour and a half before her husband was expected to arrive with the purchaser of the house. She changed her dress for a grey silk Empire gown, retouched her eyebrows, put fresh carmine on her lips and rouge to her cheeks, and was once more the mistress of the house, radiant and as if there was not a thing in the world that might annoy her.

Frances Has "News" for Dick

Ward came home at 5 o'clock. The purchaser of the house would meet him there within an hour. He felt that his petition in bankruptcy was filed and out of the way. The thing before him now was to cut down every living expense to the bone, get to work on his salaried position and save, save and pay off every cent he owed.

Frances met him in the hall with a smile and an embrace.

"I have news for you," she said, taking him into the morning room and sinking into a dining hall.

"Yes? What news?" he asked, mildly surprised.

"I think that we are saved, and that you will not have to sell the house and go to work for a salary," she replied. "We will not lose our position in society. We can still hold up our heads with the proudest of them."

"What do you mean, Frances? For heaven's sake talk sense," said Ward, petulant and nagged to the goading point, with the endless plea for explanation.

"I mean that I have managed to borrow $25,000," Frances said haughtily. "Here it is."

She placed the little package of twenty-five one-thousand dollar bills on the table in front of him.

"Why," he gasped in astonishment. "How did you get it? I'm glad you have borrowed that amount of money without security."

"I promised not to tell," the wife replied. "It is to be a secret for a while, at least until we get out of our straits."

"But you must tell me," the husband repeated. "Who loaned you that money? It is all right, I'm all right, Dick," she declared. "You must trust me and let me keep my secret."

Dick's eyes became like marble and his jaws were clamped.

"Stop this nonsense," he muttered. "Can't you understand that I cannot touch that money unless I know to whom I am beholden?"

"But, Dick, it will save us. You must think of that," she pleaded. "It means having a home, that is fit to live in and entertain in. It means that you will not have to degrade yourself by working on a salary like a clerk or some menial."

She was speaking hysterically as she realized that her husband was in no mood to be trifled with, and that it would be hard to lie to him successfully.

"Did you get it from Aunt Gretchen?" he asked.

"Yes, Dick; yes," she cried with relief. "But I promised her that I would tell no one. I had to promise her Dick. You won't say anything to her, will you, Dick? She will take the money right back, if you do, and I do so want for us to stay in this house, where we are so comfortable. We must stay here, Dick. I can't live in a cheap place. I have never been used to that. It would break my spirit, Dick.

"And, dear, if you only keep the house it will be so much easier for you to start all over in business again, and I will get along with the old motor or use a taxi. And I can let any of the maids go, and that will save a little. Now, Dick, like a good boy, please."

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

"BIG TIM" SAILS FOR ENGLAND

NEW YORK, May 11—Timothy D. Sullivan—"Big Tim" of Tammany Hall—stakeholder in the Jeffries-Johnson match, sailed to-day for a trip through Ireland, England and France. With him were Ted Marks and John Considine of Seattle. The latter is the first eye witness to reach New York from Jeffries's Rowardennan training camp.

"I visited Jeffries's camp but two weeks ago," said Considine. "I want to say that it is all a mistake for Easterners to think that the big fellow is not as good as he ever was. His water measurement is only 37 inches, and I saw him run behind a horse at a fast pace for several miles without being in distress. I am not mixed there can be but one result of the match—Jeffries will be whipped."

More AMERICANS are read in the homes in Boston than any other paper.

COMET WALTZ DANCE FEATURE

A "Halley's Comet" waltz, something new in the dance creation, is a feature of the annual "Apron and Necktie" party in Wheelock Hall, Upham's Corner, Dorchester, to-morrow evening under the auspices of the Lotus Girls Catholic Club of the Mount Pleasant section. The new dance was originated by the Misses Margaret Dempsey and Lillian Harrington, members of the organization, and they are keeping the secret to themselves.

One other feature of interest and attractiveness to the young folks of the district is the distribution of neckties of various colors by twelve pretty girls dressed in grotesque costumes.

The affair is under the direction of Miss Ella Carney. Margaret Dempsey, Louise Donovan, Estelle Reis, Margaret Curran, Mary Gulnan, Rose Bath, Lillian Harrington, Mary O'Connell, Sadie Dempsey, Theresa Carter, Annie Cunniff, Rose McNulty, Annie C. Graves, Nellie Devine, Mary McManus, Evelyn McNeil, Katherine Dunne and Gertrude Bell.

LEAVES FOSTER CHILD 2 BIRDS

A parrot, a canary and the privilege of living at an Old Folks' Home are the bequests left by Mrs. Frances F. Tabor of Malden to Miss Maud Smith, the young woman she brought up as her child and to whom it was expected she would leave her estate of $32,000.

The will was allowed by Judge Lawton at East Cambridge to-day. Charles S. Norris, treasurer of the Home Savings Bank of Boston, was appointed executor, and the estate is left to charity.

The concluding clause is interesting.

"As Maud Smith, the child I brought up, will lose her home by my death, I wish her to have a home wherever she wishes at the Tabor Old Folks' Home. If I have a dog I give it to C. H. Syds, a carpenter of Arlington. If I have a parrot, I give it to Maud Smith; if she is not living, to her mother; if she is not living, to Charles Norris. If I have a canary, I give it to Maud Smith."

548 RAILROADS IN FRUIT RATE CHARGES

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The Interstate Commerce Commission to-day heard arguments in the case of the Arlington Heights Fruit Exchange of Los Angeles, Cal., against 548 railroads, which, it is alleged, charged an excessively high rate for transporting lemons and citrus fruits. It was charged that immediately after the Payne tariff law took effect the roads placed an additional charge of ten cents on fruit rates. A decision, it is said, will affect the price of fruits in every large city in the United States.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

LAKE COPPER LEADS MARKET

The local market after a strong opening maintained its buoyancy, and though the New York list entered during the first hour coppers in Boston showed no weakness.

Lake issues were the leaders in the upward movement with Lake, Indiana and North Lake recording the largest gains on heavy trading and good buying.

Among unit industrial issues the impression prevails that the copper shares market has already accounted for the satisfactory conditions in the metal market. Another rumor which helped the coppers was that the three largest electrical manufacturing companies were now in the metal supply market for copper, and this added to the big demand from abroad promises to reduce the surplus of copper by the end of May.

The miscellaneous list some good buying was also noticeable, most of which seemed for investment in United Fruit, Shoe Machinery, and American Agricultural, while the industrial investments were the leaders. Recent reports of all three of these stocks have shown heavily increased earnings.

STEAMSHIP COUNTS IN THE ST. LAWRENCE

MONTREAL, May 11.—The Allan line steamship Grampian, from Glasgow for this port, went ashore yesterday at Cape Ray, Newfoundland, and is a total wreck. She came off at 4:40 in the afternoon and is now reported to be making her way up slowly under her own steam. The Grampian has a large number of passengers.

The EVENING AMERICAN guarantees to advertisers the largest circulation by far for any afternoon paper in Boston and over 200,000 more than the next highest evening paper, and over 75,000 more than all the other Boston evening papers combined. Circulation books open to all.

STARR GETS CLOCK FROM ASSOCIATION

L. Starr, head of L. Starr & Company of Winter street, knows what time it is. He can get the time correctly from a prize presented him at a special meeting of the L. Starr Association. J. McWeeny, president of the association, made the presentation and was emphasized the fact that the clock was a symbol of the personal esteem in which Mr. Starr was held by all members of the association. Mr. Starr responded with equally felicitous expression.

MINNEHAHA FLOATED.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., May 11.—The liner Minnehaha was refloated to-day from the Scilly Island Rocks, on which she grounded on April 18, and proceeded under her own steam to Crow Bound.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The break in wheat is hailed with rejoicing by all State street, because it is evidence that the western traders believe crops are going to be record breakers. Even the Winter wheat crop will undoubtedly be up to the average. The crops are more important than anything else just now, because the whole financial and industrial structure depends upon them. Given good crops this season, the street will have a prosperous and happy time.

The sales of copper metal were understood to be largely for export. Of the copper exported a great deal was said to be for the account of speculators in London, who are filling short contracts. Experts in copper are expecting a material increase in production for the month of May. But this has now been looked for and has been largely discounted in the price of stocks. The important development is the increased consumption of copper, which should result in a reduction of the surplus for the month of May.

The reasons for raiders in Union Pacific shifting their investments from that stock to Southern Pacific is the fact that the Southern Pacific has a concession of 64,000 acres of land per mile of road. This concession was received. It takes in land for 1,200 miles of road, but as yet only a small part has been largely discounted in the price of stocks. The important development is the increased consumption of copper, which should result in a reduction of the surplus for the month of May.

According to the financial statement for the seven months ended February 28, issued by the New York Stock Exchange, the Pullman Company is earning at the rate of $17,240,000 a year against $16,000,000 plus after deduction of depreciation charges on the latter amount, equivalent to $11,000,352 which is at the rate of $18,890,000 per annum. An increase of $8,013,000 or 72.2 per cent. over 1909, and equal to 9.21 per cent. on the present capital stock of $120,000,000. The additional surplus there is to be added an item "deferred profits, manufacturing department, prior to Jan. 1, 1910, $4,982,865," which would give a total surplus of $16,013,217, equal to 13.34 per cent. on the stock.

Advance of Canadian Pacific to 190 made Wall street remember that the Canadian railroads have always been subjected to more severe regulation by the government than is imposed by the United States legislature. Intelligent public supervision of railroads will add to the safety of railroad investments, and now that the worst is known, the rate of dispersion among railroad men to take a cheerful view of the whole subject.

The statement of President Brown of the New York Central system that the future should have a wide bearing. Besides making a large increase in the price of grain in the western territory, Mr. Brown had unequaled facilities for obtaining reliable information. Two Old-Fashioned Democrats and the Income Tax

There is just this difference between Frank H. Pope of Leominster and Frank Curtiss of Sheffield, the two Democratic members of the House of Representatives who voted against the ratification of the federal income tax amendment:

Before election Curtiss announced publicly that, if elected, he would not vote for the amendment. Pope signed a pledge to the effect that, if elected, he intended to vote for it.

Curtiss comes from a district in which the income tax question does not amount to much as a political issue. Besides that, he votes so seldom with the Democrats that the other members of the House look upon his Democracy as a joke. As Curtiss is a very wealthy man and comes from a very conservative district he can afford to be independent.

Mr. Pope, on the other hand, does vote with the Democrats once in a while, but there are times when he does not disappoint the interests that support the Republican party machine.

Last Fall, when the income tax question was quite an issue, the Harvard Political Club endeavored to ascertain what the candidates for election to the Legislature thought about it. They sent out pledge cards to all of them.

This reply came from Mr. Pope:

"If elected to the House I intend to vote for the ratification of the proposed income tax amendment to the national constitution."

But Mr. Pope did not vote to ratify the income tax amendment. He has been accused of having broken a pledge that won for him support in his canvass for election. He explains, or rather attempts to explain, that there is a vast difference between the meaning of the words "I shall" vote and the words "I intend" to vote.

It is extremely difficult to follow Mr. Pope's line of reasoning. To the ordinary man it would seem as if one who, in a political emergency, goes on record as saying "I intend" to do a thing was to be relied upon as much as the man who says "I shall" do a thing.

But what's the use of quibbling about the meaning of the words! When Mr. Pope signed that pledge as a candidate he did it for the purpose of conveying to the voters the fact that, if elected, he would vote for the income tax amendment. That was his intention, and no amount of straining over the meaning of words can make the ordinary man believe otherwise.

He paved the way to his seat in the Legislature with his pledge, which reminds us that another hot place is paved with good intentions.

When the question of adopting the amendment was before the House, Mr. Pope delivered a carefully prepared speech. In that speech he made no reference to the fact that, before election, he had gone on record as intending to vote for the income tax, but had changed his mind.

He argued that he was "an old-fashioned" Democrat and a believer in State rights. Strange as it may seem, his emphatic defense of State rights was heartily applauded by a big majority of the Republican members of the House.

That was one of the funny features of the debate. Since when has the doctrine of State rights become one of the fundamental principles of the Republican party of Massachusetts?

When the Civil War was drawing to a close the national government began to collect an income tax. At that time, when the country was in its sorest distress and Lincoln was the chief executive, the Republicans of Massachusetts did not go on record in opposition to such a tax.

We have read much about "old-fashioned" Democrats. But we have never read that it was one of their habits to break their solemn pledges. We have read much about Jeffersonian Democrats and we have always thought it was natural for them to consider their promises sacred and inviolable.

"With such knowledge as I later had of the purpose and power of the intended amendment," Mr. Pope naively explains, "I exercised my undeniable right as an American citizen to change my intention."

It would be more satisfactory if he would let us know what that knowledge of the purpose and the power of the amendment was that had such a violent effect upon his mind. Perhaps he would like to see the form of the amendment changed. Maybe he would like to see the phrase "from whatever source derived" eliminated. That has been the excuse of many who have tried to explain their attitude of opposition.

They say they do not favor giving Congress the power to tax incomes "from whatever source derived" because "incomes from State and city bonds should be excluded from taxation." Isn't it absolutely plain that, if the amendment should be changed so as to permit the Supreme Court to exclude incomes from such bonds, the court would be free to go a step further and exclude incomes from the stocks and bonds of all corporations chartered by the States on the ground that they are instrumentalities of such governments?

The enemies of this most equitable form of taxation are playing a very shrewd double game. They would either defeat the federal income tax as at present drafted or they would defeat its purpose through an amendment to it, so worded as to leave with the Supreme Court full power to nullify any decently adjusted income tax law Congress might adopt.

The Massachusetts House has gone on record against the income tax. The Senate will act upon it to-morrow. It is too much to expect the Senate to favor ratification.

But the fight has only just begun. The income tax will be an issue in the next State campaign and will come before the Legislature of next year.

Shirking wealth may escape paying its just burdens of the country for a time, but it cannot go on forever controlling a majority of the State Legislatures.

COUNT LEO TOLSTOI

WRITES OF HIS VIEWS ON

WHAT WILL HAPPEN IN RUSSIA

By Count Leo Tolstoi

AT the servants of the modern Djenghis-Khan too stupid and too dull, or have their deeds of violence already transgressed the limits beyond which the people are no longer able to submit to their insults and the conditions of slavery imposed upon them? Have railroads, telegraphs, newspapers, while a powerful weapon in the hands of the mighty Djenghis-Khan, at the same time served to unite all the people? Have the majority of the Russian people, the peasants who are not yet degraded by the schools, preserved in their souls the true Christian doctrine of the equality and brotherhood of men which does not allow murder, nor even violence? No matter what the reason be, one thing is certain—the Russian people, the true Russian people, have lost not only the respect of their government, but the faith in the necessity of any government whatever.

The proof of this was shown when the Czar went south. His passing by evoked everywhere the same feeling—the consciousness of the evident uselessness and malfeasance of the Czar and all his aides.

Secrecy Arouses People's Suspicions

The Czar represents the man, who is the head of the Government, who is supposed to be recognized by his entire people as their born ruler, who holds the power to make every one happy, must indeed be a sacred person to the Russian people. This man is supposed to be beyond all needs, beyond all desires, and all fear. In regard to such a person there can be only one feeling, as in the days of Nicholas I., a desire to see him, to ask some favor of him, to express one's loyalty and devotion to his person. The only task of all those who surround him should be this: To keep within reasonable bounds the enthusiastic crowds who desire to show their adoration of him. Perhaps it still looks this way in the eyes of sunocracy, as it did in times gone by. But in reality, how does it look?

The Czar travels with his aides, the men who are close to him, and who carry out his will. Knowing that among the people over whom they rule there are thousands and thousands of persons who hate the Czar who will try to kill him in a hundred ways, these men try to protect the Czar's life by lining up along the whole imperial route a triple row of secret service men and police agents. The Czar is travelling through his own empire and a triple row of soldiers, of policemen and of disguised peasants torn away from their work without any remuneration, stand on their feet, one day, two days, a whole week, waiting for the imperial train and cursing the author of this nuisance. The exact day when the Czar will pass is not made known, that those who tend to kill him may not succeed. Besides, it is not one imperial train that passes, but several, and no one knows on which one the Czar travels. Secretly, and in hiding, the Czar passes through the triple rows of his guards. Nobody sees him except a few officials and distinguished personages, who are formally presented to him in the towns where his train stops, while the same precautions are taken to guard his person against the attempts which are feared always and everywhere.

It is tacitly agreed that the people recognize the necessity, and the blessings of having a ruler, but if this ruler is thus situated that he does not even show himself, that he hides himself, does like a thief from those whom he has robbed, why should it then be necessary to have a ruler? Why is there any necessity of having a ruler who rules not because his people love him, but because he has guns and swords to protect him, while he remains in hiding?

No Hope of Relief From Injustice

This is what has suddenly become clear to the majority of the Russian people. "Why does the Czar hide himself? When he hides himself, it is not without reason; it is because he is ashamed of his own actions." Thus think the majority of the Russian people.

Without speaking of the considerable number of people who have been hanged, deported or thrown into prisons, nearly all innocent, these tens of thousands of people have fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, wives, children, friends, who cannot help hating him who is to blame for all their misfortune. Without speaking of the hundreds of thousands who have natural reasons to hate the Czar and his henchmen, the main part of the people, the peasants who, robbed of their land, are in a position worse than fifty years ago, the peasants who are waiting for their relief from slavery, are all beginning to look upon the Czar and his aides with the same hostile feeling as those who have suffered directly.

This is why the Czar and his helpers cannot help fearing the peasants who hate the Government. They feel their indignation, which closely resembles hate, because of their unheeded complaints, and the terrible injustice to which they must submit, without any hope of relief.

It is true that there are people who tell the unfortunate Czar that the whole people is devoted to him and that the old faith of the nation in God and the Little Father is unshaken.

These people, however, do not believe their own words and the Czar is probably the only one who is blind to the real situation. On the strength of their assurances the ruler continues his nefarious violent work, and thus destroys the last remaining pillars on which his power rests. The uselessness, the stupidity the crime of despotic power becomes more and more evident to the immense majority of the people.

It is difficult to predict what the consequences will be, but that they will be fatal to the government is absolutely certain.

Perhaps, though not very likely, the present form of government will be able to maintain itself for some time. Perhaps there will come another revolution, which again will be crushed because the strength of the combatants is too unequal, but at any rate the Russian people will become more and more convinced of the uselessness of the present criminal government, and the result will be that the immense majority, from conscientious reasons, will be unable to obey the government, or execute the immoral demands on which it exists. As soon as the people shall have arrived at this conclusion, as soon as it shall be clear to every one that the so-called government is nothing but a group of men defending their position by a series of incessant crimes, then they will inevitably cease to obey such a government and participate in its crimes.

Horrible Structure of Government Will Fall

"I am asked to participate in the acts of the government," the man who has become convinced of the crime of the present government will say to himself. "I am asked to pay taxes, to take part in administrative, judiciary, educational, police acts. I am asked to submit to military service. But why should I do all this when I know that in doing so I rob myself of my time, and that all these acts are contrary to common sense and the demands of the most elementary morals?"

"Those who have learned to understand that by obeying the government they make slaves of themselves and rob themselves of the most elementary spiritual happiness will have only one answer to the demands of the government: "As long as you have the power you may do with me what you please—imprison me, deport me, kill me. I know I cannot resist you, and shall not try to do so; but I also know that I will have no part in your pernicious action, no matter how much you threaten me."

A feeling of this kind already exists in Russia, in the consciences of the majority of Russians, and if the government persists in its foolish, inhuman and cruel way, the sentiment must inevitably take form of action.

As soon as this happens, as soon as the majority of the people cease to obey the government and take part in its actions, then, without any struggle, without any bloodshed, the horrible structure of the Russian Government will crumble into dust, because it has for a long time been out of harmony with modern ethics.

Little Bobbie

He Writes About The Great National Game

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Pa took Ma & me up to the baseball park for to see the Yankees and the Red Sox play. We all got there before the game started. It is indeed fortunate for you and littel Bobbie, sed Pa, that you are here to see this game in the company of a man like me, which has played the game himself—a man that was reconed, in his pa grate as Ty Cobb or Mister Hans Wagner.

You never todd me that you played ball for a living, sed Ma. I dident say I played it for a living, sed Pa, any more than I wod git married for a living. Jest cos that I know'd the game. know it in every way. Dount ask too many foolish questions, because it always bores a grate authority on baseball to answer foolish questions.

Jest then the game beegan, & a big feller calm up to the plate & Pa sed He, thare goes Hemphill. That lasent Hemphill, I todd Pa, but is the Boston fens batting, & that is one of the Boston players. I say it lasent, sed Pa. Come on, you Hemphill.

That lasent Hemphill, sed a man setting next to Pa, & keep yure big Westons off my corns, or I will hang one yure pere beaver. Were you addressing me? sed Pa. Indeed I was, sed the man, & I mean every word the way I sed it. I am a peecebul man in fits, sed the man, but wen a guy with a hed shaped like the home plate coms up to me & calls players by there wrong names & steps on my sore feet, sumthing is going to trans-spire.

I dount take any talk from anybody as a rule, sed Pa, but as there is a lady & a littel boy with me, I shall have to submit to yure crule sneers. If you dident have the lady and the littel boy with you, sed the man to Pa, you wuddent let a yelp out, of you.

Pa was gritty mad, but he dident say any more for nearly five minnits. Then the Yankee team calm to bat, & the man which had called Pa down hollered, "Put the wood to it, Hemp."

I think he means Hemphill, sed Pa, but he is wrong, that is a Boston player which is batting now.

Say, you big cheese, sed the man to Pa, if you dount stop contradicting me, I will grease you by the gullet & put you cleer out of it. I guess you dount know who I am, the man sed. I am called the Chelsea Strangler, & I am nevver happy till I see a man's face git black.

I am glad to meet you, Mister Strangler, sed Pa. This is my wife & littel son. Pa was awful afrade of the man, he was shaking all over.

I dount want to meet the trasp, sed Ma. Dount interduce him to me. Hush, sed Pa, he mite heer you. He is a tuff, ruff feller. I dount let him heer you.

Then Ma beegan to talk loud. I sed he was a trasp, sed Ma. You may be afrade of him, but if he says another word I will jab out his eyes with this new parasol.

I guess the tuff, ruff man was afrade of Ma, beekaus he got up & went away. He dident want to be rude to a lady, sed Pa. Them tuff fellers has lots of hart. Maybe they have lots of hart, sed Ma, but that is more than I can say of my husband.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

STENOGRAPHERS' UNION.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

The correspondence you have recently published regarding a stenographers' union came to my notice to-day, and I fully second this motion. From my own experience as a stenographer I think it is outrageous the salary offered to girls when applying for positions, and unless a girl is well dressed she seems to get no consideration.

I fully indorse this proposition of a union, which, if organized, would do away with "$6.00 a week stenographers," and if said union materializes I would gladly head the list.

ALICE LORETTE.

AMERICAN FAIR TO CATHOLICS

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Allow me to thank you from the very depths of my heart for the most excellent editorials concerning the recent affairs between the head of the Roman Catholic Church and our former President and Vice-President.

In your defence of the Catholic Church you speak the truth—which few other dare to speak. Your paper treats that religion far better than any journal in this country.

I am proud to say that I am one of the vast army of American readers.

Kindly tell me when your second volume of editorials in book form will be issued, as I am anxious to procure it.

J. VICTOR WALSH.
